Swine Breeders Have 31st Annual Banquet

BLUE BALL — About 200 swine breeders attended the Lancaster and Chester County annual meeting here last Friday evening. The program included a motion picture about the results in the checkoff program and Roger Rohr's Canadian hunting adventures.

In addition, Andy Groff, Lampeter, received the James Z. Martin Swine Achievement Award and the following directors were elected: Chester County, Ken Emery; Lancaster County, Eric

Gala Event Showcases PA Ag Products

HARRISBURG — The gala event that showcases Pennsylvania's excellent farm products took place again here as the 1988 Keystone Corncopia unfolded in the Sheraton's East banquet room. From the reception that included cheese, honey, chips, pretzels, mushrooms, eggs and milk to the buffet of chicken, pork, beef, fruits and vegetables the "Plenty of the Land Became the Banquet" of the more than 500 ag industry and legislative leaders that attend this social highlight from year to year.

A large number of state legislators attended the Corncopia sponsored by the Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations. And in addition to the first-hand indoctrination of the importance of agriculture, these state senators and representatives received a food basket full of the bounty of Pennsylvania's ag economy to take home.

Rabies Is In Lebanon County

BY LISA RISSER

PRESCOTT (LEBANON CO.) — "Rabies is here today," Dr. Lynn Sammons, DVM, of Willow Creek Animal Hospital in Reading, told farmers at the Lebanon Valley National Bank luncheon seminar on Wednesday.

"On Monday, half a mile from here (the Prescott Fire Hall), a racoon was killed that tested positive," Sammons said. "Two weeks ago, a cow in Jonestown tested positive.

"This is a very serious concern," he added. "It takes only 10 days after contracting the disease for cows to die. In humans that period could last up to three weeks, depending on how far away from the brain the bite is, resulting in the worst kind of death."

Sammons recommended that farmers vaccinate all domestic animals on the farm that can be handled. Those that won't let the farmer approach, or display unusual behavior, should be eliminated. In addition, all wildlife coming onto the farm, especially in the daylight, should be killed.

Any animal that is killed should be buried immediately, even in this weather when digging a grave is near to impossible. The animal should be buried without being touched by the farmer or another human being.

Extension Service Started "Farming By The Book"

BY SALLY BAIR
Lancaster Co. Correspondent

LANCASTER — Although "farming by the book" was not always accepted in Lancaster County, most farmers eventually came to accept the idea that the Lancaster County Extension Service had something to offer, according to Earl Groff, president of the Lancaster County Extension Board from 1946-1951.

Reminiscing on the 75th anniversary of the Lancaster County Extension Service, Groff said, "It was certainly good to get the knowledge and expertise they offered. It was important that we get the benefit of establishing methods based on research."

Groff praised the early leadership of "Dutch" Bucher, saying his unique position of being an agent who lived in the county made him be more readily accepted than others. He said, "Those who supported "Dutch" were really interested in getting it to work. We were fortunate to get a man like that."

Groff, who milked 30 head of Holsteins on his 116 acre farm, was probably considered progressive at the time. His was the first farm in Pennsylvania to adopt a system of broad based terraces. Groff says, "It used to bother me as I'd plow and work up and down the slopes that it was taking away the topsoil that we could never recover." Groff also worked with Southeastern Pennsylvania Artificial Breeders Cooperative, though a few skeptics assured him that he was going to hurt his herd by using artificial insemination. Groff says, "It permitted us the use of bulls that were not otherwise available. I was fairly successful."

Earl's enthusiasm for the benefits of Extension were shared with his son J. Wade, who became president of the Board in 1971. Wade said, "Extension to me was the voice of research at the college. We were able to get unbiased information."

The younger Groff remembers that their farm was a "demonstration" farm in 1963, receiving special attention with soil tests and a survey on the soil profile. There were also recommended crops to plant. Groff says, "We used the Extension Service to help contour the farm, and Harry Sloat helped us in our bookkeeping. He showed us how to take a capital gains break in the selling of cows." He added that they also used advice from

ACRES CORN UPDATE: Corn futures settled from 3/4 cents lower to 1/2 cent higher today. Prices generally were steady to lower throughout the session, but spillover strength from the soybean and wheat pits in the closing moments lent support to corn. The export demand factor still provides support along with no appreciable increase in cash movement. Yesterday's neutral Supply and Demand report kept today's activity lackluster and March finally touched $2.04 but failed to hold as profits were taken. Generic certificate bids remain in the 104 to 105% area.

ACRES SOYBEAN UPDATE: Soybeans settled from 3/4 to 3 cents higher in last minute buying after an other wise dull and featureless session. Stronger cash fundamentals provided support for the front months along with light farmer selling. Yesterday's Supply and Demand report proved to be neutral with a steady opening this morning.

Oil was under pressure from disappointing export news. March gained 3 cents and closed out at $6.12-3/4 after hitting a low of $6.07 early in the session.

ACRES WHEAT UPDATE: Wheat futures closed from 1-4 to 4 cents higher this afternoon as a late short covering rally boosted prices to daily highs. Export rumors have resurfaced that China was back in the market, but it remains to be seen if their purchases will be hard or soft red. Selling throughout the session was attributed to the issuance of the new CCC catalog which will make over 302 million bushels available. Support came from the 100 million bushel decrease in the carryout figures and follow through from yesterday's closes. March closed today at $3.30-3/4 down 1/4 cent after trading at $3.31-3/4 earlier in the session.

ACRES CATTLE UPDATE: Live cattle futures closed lower

Legs and leg quarters were in better balance but adequate for immedeiate deliveries Wings were well cleared and dealers were willing to build some inventory on this item Giblets were irregular but have moved into a closer balance in a few quarters.

OPINION
Farmers Work Long Hours

The standard, 40-hour American work week may sound like a vacation to many farmers, based on recently compiled results of USDA's Farm Costs and Returns Survey for 1986.

Robert Leiby and David Dunbar, Lehigh County Extension, report that the survey, conducted by the National Agricultural Statistics Service, collected data from a sample of thousands of farmers representing around 1.6 million of the nation's 2.2 million farms.

Among the results, reams of detailed, farm-level data on returns, debts and assets, costs of production, farm family living expenses, production practices, and the distribution of debt among lenders.

In addition to the financial infoirmation, however, Economic Research Service economists have also reported on other survey findings, including the following statistics:

•The average reported age of operators in 1986 was 51, the same as in 1985. Farmers with sales in excess of $40,000 tended to be younger than average. Operators of smaller farms were older and tended to be more financially solvent than their younger counterparts.

•Nearly two-thirds of operators with 1986 agricultural sales of less than $10,000 did not consider farming to be their major occupation, while nine out of ten farmers with sales of over $40,000 said farming was their primary job.

•Farmers with sales in excess of $100,000 reported that they spent an average 56-58 hours per week, 50 weeks per year, working on their farm operation. That compared with an average of less than 30 hours per week, 43-44 weeks per year, for farmers with sales of less than $20,000.

•Among different farm types, the longest hours, not surprisingly, were worked by dairy farmers, who reported a 68-hour average week and only one week off per year. The next toughest schedule was reported by poultry producers--39 hours per week on average and 49 weeks per year. Cash gain farmers were third in total hours, with a 40-hour week and 43 weeks per year. Of course, these averages include the shorter work weeks of small, part-time farmers, and they do not include hours worked off the farm. But anyway you look at it, farmers are a dedicated group of business people. And like most other self-employed people, the time clock isn't one of their major pieces of equipment.

To Recognize The Value of Lime For Weed Control

You have never heard us recommend lime for weed control; however, indirectly lime is important to obtain good herbicide weed control. Both research and farm experience has indicated that herbicides are not as effective in sour soil. So, for best control with chemicals, the soil-test requirement must be satisfy poor weed control experiences have been reported on sour soil. A complete soil test will indicate the amount of lime needed. There are many other advantages to crop production in addition to better herbicide action.

To Keep Small Children Away From Machinery

The spring cropping season will be starting in another month. That means that a lot of farm machines will be put into operation and things will really be moving. Small children like to become a part of this action and ask to ride on machinery, or even operate some of the smaller tractors. It might take nerve to refuse them at times; however, for their own protection they should not become involved. Many serious accidents have happened because "Dad" or "Grandad" took them along.

Where there are small children, all machinery operators should be especially careful of their exact location. Farm machinery and small children do not mix.

To Know Sewage Sludge Content

The use of sewage sludge on farm land is becoming more common. As the amount of this material increases, the farmers should be aware of the danger of excessive application. There can be a problem of too much sludge causing a build-up of heavy metals such as zinc, copper, cadmium and cobalt. When these metals become too high in the soil they are toxic to plants.

Farmers that utilize sewage sludge are urged to require a test of the material in order to know the exact mineral and fertilizer content. Disposal plants must provide this test information for their farmers in order to know what is being done. Both the sewage and the soil can be tested through the Penn State Testing Laboratory. Don't apply sludge without knowing the mineral build-up in the soil.

To Take A Correspondence Course

To become knowledgeable about a certain subject and continue with your normal job is a possibility. Penn State offers a number of correspondence courses in agriculture and related areas that should be of great help to everyone. Such subjects as Beef Production, Dairy Cattle Feeding, Rabbit Production, Pesticide Usage, Plant Life, Home Vegetable Gardening and many more are covered. These lessons are sent by mail and are practical at a very nominal cost. Details are available at any Extension Office in the state. A bulletin describing the various courses is available. Don't overlook this method of learning more about a special subject.

The Cooperative Extension Service is an affirmative action, equal opportunity educational institution.

THE ONLY WAY TO "SURVIVE"
February 14, 1988

Background Scripture: Matthew 16: 13:28.
Devotional Reading: Philippians 2:5-11.

Most of us are so familiar with the teachings of Jesus that we tend to forget that they present a radically different approach to life. When Jesus first appeared, preaching and teaching, the religious authorities found his ideas in direct conflict with their own. But the teachings of Jesus are no less radical to the world in which we live. They challenge just about every major premise of the popular mind. The only reason that contemporary Christianity is not much more in conflict with our society is because most of us have consciously or unconsciously blunted and obscured the points of conflict.

When Jesus began to speak of his coming, passing and death in Jerusalem, many who heard him were scandalized. To their way of thinking, a "suffering messiah" was a contradiction in terms: if one was a messiah, he would not "suffer," and if one "suffered," he would not be the messiah! These two ideas were so mutually exclusive to the Hebrew mind that many wrote him off as a madman. A messiah who suffered was unthinkable.

LOSING ISN'T LOSING

No less unthinkable are some of Jesus' teachings today. His view of the world, of human existence, life and what is important is really quite incompatible to many of the concepts of Western society. For example, take the question of survival. Jesus began with the human desire to survive, to save one's own life as long and as fully as possible. Where Jesus differed from everyone else was in the method he offered for survival: you can only truly save your life when you are willing to give it away! Both then and today that teaching was and is totally in conflict with the way of the world.

Actually, Jesus never asked anyone to really lose his or her life. Instead he challenged them to try a different way of saving themselves. In fact, Jesus tried to help them realize that the world's way would never work. "For whoever would save his life will lose it, and whoever loses his life for my sake will find it" (Matthew 16:25). This means that things are not what they seem. If, using the world's means, we "save" our lives, we will find that that security is but temporary. It is in the long run that we will have lost the very essence of life. If, however, we "lose" our life for Jesus' sake, we lose only in the short run, and gain in the long run of eternity.

Even if we have a hard time seeing how this works, we can find some evidence to substantiate it. We witness what happens when people try to cling to life with material possessions and power. "You can't take it with you" is proven to peasant and Pharoah alike. The grave is the great equalizer. None of the world's goods can really grant us survival in the long run. Holding on to life is like trying to keep a fistful of sand.

THE CROSS BECAUSE

Jesus taught true survival with both his words and his life. No sooner had his disciples confessed him as "the Christ, the son of the living God," then Jesus "began to show his disciples that he must go to Jerusalem and suffer many things from the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed . . ." (16:21). Jesus would suffer the cross, not despite the fact that he was the Messiah, but because he was.

And so Christians will need to bear the cross, not despite the fact that they are Christians, but because they are: "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me" (16:24).

from 13 to 68 points this afternoon as profit taking eroded prices throughout the afternoon. Further weakness came from ideas that recent gains were overdone with the danger existing that the market had become overbought. New contract highs were made early as strong cash fundamentals lent support to futures along with lighter movement.

CME FEEDER CATTLE SETTLEMENT PRICE: 02/08/88 $81.80 up $ .44.

ACRES NEXT DAY OUTLOOK: cash -steady to higher futures-mixed to weaker.

ACRES HOG UPDATE: Live hog futures closed moderately lower with selling attributed to profit-taking eroded earlier gains. Researchers have been telling us since 1892 that limestone – 38%+ calcium feed grade limestone – is necessary to maintain optimal shell quality. Then, in the early '70's, researchers found that if the fine limestone was supplemented with a larger particle size calcium source, the shell quality of high speed layers could be maintained even better.

YORK CALCIUM CHIPS were developed in the late '70's as the dependable and economical source of calcium for the modern layer.

Since that time, continual comparisons by universities, research centers and egg producers have confirmed the benefits that poultrymen receive when they add YORK CALCIUM CHIPS to their laying rations.

For improved shells and lower feed costs, have your feed supplier add "CHIPS" to your formula.

Farm Costs Survey Starts Next Week

HARRISBURG — Interviewers will begin knocking on the doors of 500 Pennsylvania farms next week for the fourth-annual Farm Costs and Returns Survey.

The major, nationwide survey of costs of production and financial conditions throughout the farm sector is conducted by the state offices of the National Agricultural Statistics Service, a branch of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Across the nation, 24,000 farmers will be contacted. The 500 Commonwealth farm operators will be surveyed between Feb. 19 and March 21 by representatives of the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS).

State Statistician Wally Evans said interviewers will collect data on farm expenses, finances, capital purchases and costs of production for 1987. The information will be used to determine farm production expenditures, measure farm income, and assess other key indicators of the farm sector.

"This survey is important to Pennsylvania farmers, because in addition to national results, state-level information will be published," Evans said.

"This will give those who participate in this state the opportunity to tell their story and represent Pennsylvania farmers in the national sample.

"We are asking for their time and cooperation so that the survey can present an accurate, up-to-date picture of agriculture in Pennsylvania and the U.S.," Evans said.

Responses to survey questionnaires are confidential and are only used with other reports to arrive at state and national totals.

The results will be published by USDA in various reports scheduled for release beginning this summer.

Questions about the survey should be directed to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service at (717) 787-3904 or through the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's toll-free number, 1-800-AG-PENNA.

Atlantic Payments $6.95 Million In Equity

SOUTHAMPTON — Atlantic Dairy Cooperative distributed $6.95 million in equity payments Feb. 1 to more than 4,000 members, according to Treasurer Evan L. Fineman.

The payout was the second of its kind since Atlantic was formed one year ago. It represents a return of investment that dairy farmers made in Atlantic's predecessor organizations, Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative and Lehigh Valley Farmers.

Since Inter-State and Lehigh merged on Feb. 1, 1987, nearly $16 million in equity and patronage refunds have been returned to Atlantic members.

"The success of the Atlantic merger has made these payments possible," Fineman said. "Atlantic has continued the tradition of a strong and stable cooperative."

Atlantic Dairy Cooperative represents 4,000 dairy farm families in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

Extension Service

Extension when they changed their dairy barns.

Willis Esbenshade, Lancaster, agreed that there were those who were not sure about Extension because of the idea that they were "taught out of a book." A general farmer, Esbenshade served as president of the Extension Board from 1956-1959, and it was during that time that the Lancaster County Farm and Home Foundation was organized to begin to raise funds for the present Farm and Home Center.

Esbenshade was elected president of that Board and provided leadership for both for a while.

He says the Extension Board was solidly behind the idea of a new building, because "the Post Office Building was a little unhandy for farmers." He made numerous trips to Washington on behalf of the Board as they worked to get non-profit status from the Internal Revenue Service so that contributions could be tax deductible.

Esbenshade also recalls meeting with the Commissioners to get budget approval, adding, "Sometimes you had to do a little talking to get the money."

He was also president of the Farm Bureau during that busy time, and says with a smile, "People would call me to see if dates were open for a banquet."

Although Robert C. Groff was born on Walnut Street in Lancaster City, he was involved with Extension for so long it became natural for him to assume the presidency of the Extension Board in 1960-1963. About his tenure he says, "I enjoyed it. Extension has helped a lot of people." He was president during the fundraising years for the Farm and Home Center, but had no qualms about the need for a building. "We were so cramped and jammed in at the offices at the Post Office."

Groff's association with Extension came as a young boy living on his grandparents' farm near Strasburg, when he was encouraged in his 4-H projects by Earl Groff and Elvin Hess. It was through serving on the 4-H judging team that he met his wife Millie, a member of Dauphin County's beef judging team.

He became head tester for the Lancaster Dairy Herd Improvement Association, and recalls visiting farms throughout the county as he worked to train new testers. In those days it was customary for testers to stay on the farms, taking meals with families. In addition to doing the actual testing on the premises with a centrifuge and the bookwook, Groff recalls babysitting, filling silo and registering cows for people who normally wouldn't have bothered. He often attended church or prayer meetings with his farmer hosts, and he remembers learning to play canasta and pinochle. Groff also remembers getting lots of good food.

After being a tester he farmed "for shares" on a farm near Denver that was a neighbor to County Agent Bucher's farm. Groff recalls that his landlord always wished him to plant corn somewhat earlier than his grandfather's recommended planting date of May 20. Groff always held off planting and felt his reluctance to early planting paid off the year that Bucher was harrowing out his early planting and planting over because of the poor, grassy stand on the same day Groff was starting to plant.

Sam Dum, professor emeritus of agricultural economics at Penn State, has been on both sides of the extension service -- giving and receiving. As s 4-H'er in Perry County, he had projects in beef cattle, potatoes and flower. He eventually got his Ph.D. in agricultural economics from Purdue, and taught in Delaware for two years before moving to a farm at East Petersburg in 1952. It was during those years of milking 30 head of cattle, raising 700 layering hens and farming 12-15 acres of tobacco that he used advice from the Extension Service himself. "I used them extensively for various economic information. Extension was really depended upon quite extensively for technical information."

Dum returned to Penn State as a professor and is now retired and farming again, this time in partnership with his son on a dairy farm in West Hempfield Township. He says he feels that now many farmers are relying upon commercial suppliers of service such as custom sprayers, since it has become so difficult to apply your own herbicides and insecticides.

Another Extension supporter in Lancaster County is B. Snavely Garber, who served as president in 1953, and recalls the desire of the Board to get out of the Post Office Building, "instead of going up those stairs."

He started his association with Extension with a 4-H Guernsey project. Later, he remembers that he and his wife Barbara would have Harry Sloat come to the farm to help "finish up the books," and they would show their appreciation by giving him three dozen eggs.

Garber said that he remembers Extension leading the way in introducing new varieties of corn, especially, beardless barley, which averaged 15-20 bushels more than the old varieties.

He said he was often able to turn away a smooth talking dealer by saying he would check with Extension and State College before making a decision about a purchase. The greatest change, he says, is that "technically we find we have to put work on a different set of ailments." Extension's greatest strength, according to Garber, is sharing information among Universities. He concluded, "When you're running a farm and have a little problem, if you get a hold of those college boys, they can help you."

Conference Slated For Apple Growers

HERSHEY — More than 1,000 people from the United States and other countries are expected to attend the International Dwarf Tree Conference here on February 28 through March 1. The meeting, which will feature 35 speakers including three from foreign countries, is aimed primarily at apple growers.

The theme of the high-powered meeting, which is sponsored by the International Dwarf Tree Association, is "Customizing a System for Your Orchard. Speakers topics include the performance of apple systems, performance of advanced rootstock candidates from the Geneva apple rootstock project, hardiness of peaches, and the hardiness of apple rootstocks.

The keynote speaker is Pierre Herman, an internationally known nurseryman and apple producer, who will discuss the French Axe system for producing apples. This system is thought by many to be the most efficient method of producing apples.

Another featured speaker is Dr. Sivero Sansavini of the University of Bologna, Italy. Dr. Sansavini will focus on high-density peach systems and dwarving rootstocks.

The pre-registration fee is $17 for entries postmarked February 18. Later submissions or registration at the door is $34. Send a check to International Dwarf Tree Association, Michigan State University, Department of Horticulture, East Lansing, MI 48824.

Russian Visitors Compare 'A Wonder Of Nature' To 'The Garden Spot'

Marvin Witmer (left) describes his dairy operation as Dimitri Kretsy takes notes. An interpreter translates as other Soviet visitors from Moldavia look on. Kretsy is manager of a collective farm of approximately 13,000 acres.

LANCASTER — The fertile black soil of the Soviet Socialist Republic of Moldavia is the standard by which other soils in the Soviet Union are judged. Called "a wonder of nature," it is responsible for the productivity of the agriculture there which accounts for 54 percent of the Republic's income, and employs one out of every two people in production.

It was only fitting, therefore, that eleven visitors from this rich agricultural area should travel to Lancaster County, "the Garden Spot." The eleven stayed in homes in Lancaster County, and were able to observe Lancaster's mix of agriculture and industry at close range. The visit was arranged through The Friendship Force, a citizen's organization which believes "a world of friends is a world of peace."

The Moldavian Soviet Socialist Republic is located on the western border of the Soviet Union, between the country of Romania and the Republic of Ukraine, long known as the "breadbasket" of the Soviet Union. Its agriculture is varied, and they have developed an "agro-industrial complex" which includes processing of many of the products produced there.

The group from Moldavia represented a diverse mix, including scientists, educators, a welder, a health minister, a furniture factory manager and an official with the Communist party. But there was none as interested in agriculture as Dimitri Kretsy, a collective farm manager, who took lots of pictures and often made notations in his notebook.

Kretsy's collective farm encompasses nearly 13,000 acres, including nearly 2,000 acres of grapes and 1,000 acres of garden plots cultivated by workers on the farm. They cultivate corn, wheat, barley and make hay from grasses, with four or five cuttings a year. The 1600 workers on the farm and their families live in villages.

They also raise 3,000 beef cattle, purchasing them as calves from neighboring collectives and growing them to about 1500 pounds in the next 18 to 24 months.

But his real interest was dairying. The farm operation he oversees has 1,000 black and white cows which are milked three times daily. Average daily production is about half of Lancaster County's average.

Their ration is a mixture of grains and hay, and the grains are stored in trench silos.

Kretsy was especially delighted with a visit to Turkey Hill Dairy near Conestoga where he watched the milking operation for the 1,000 cow dairy, and viewed the processing plant.

At Altantic Breeders Cooperative he showed a fascination for learning about the way the bulls are selected and put into production. He told his local hosts that artificial insemination is common in the Soviet Union. Indeed, there is a small amount of Atlantic semen which makes its way to the Soviet Union through their marketing group, Worldwide Sires.

He also visited the family farm of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Miller, Jr., where he saw an 80-head dairy operation and was especially interested in the six children who each had their own chores to do. Clearly charmed by children, Kretsy was interested in the baby who played in a wagon in the barn during the milking.

The entire group visited the farm of Marvin K. Witmer, near Lititz, with Kretsy leading the questioning about the ration for the day and the cows' production. Witmer had filled containers with the amount of feed one cow consumes in a day, visually communicating with the group which used a translator.

The grapes produced in Moldavia go into winemaking and represents 25 percent of all the wine produced in the Soviet Union. Tobacco is another crop which grows well in Moldavia. Kretsy said the tobacco is processed elsewhere.

Other members of the Soviet group visited the mushroom facilities of Needham Mushroom Farm near Kennett Square. They were interested in seeing the houses where the mushrooms grow,

At Age 96 This Young Lady Still Devoted To Holsteins

BY SALLY BAIR
Lancaster Co. Correspondent

YORK — Mabel Rishel was named to the Pennsylvania Holstein Hall of Fame in 1983, recognizing the contributions she and her late husband Norman made to the Pennsylvania Holstein Association. In 1982 they were named to the York County Holstein Hall of Fame. She will be 96 in September, but continues to be interested in Holstein activities and enjoys reading the publications that arrive in the mail.

While Mabel will not be at the 75th anniversary celebration this month, there was a period of time when Mabel wouldn't miss a convention. In an interview at the home of her daughter Ruth Gleim where she has lived for the past three years, Mabel said, "I didn't count 'em, I just went." Ruth, who often accompanied her mother after her father's death, says they attended nearly 35 consecutive conventions. Mabel said they usually drove to the national conventions but added, "If necessary, we flew." Ruth also points out that bad weather was never a deterrent to attendance.

Mabel adds, "I always enjoyed the conventions and went as long as I could. We went to meet old friends. We were very close."

Asked what she liked best about the conventions, Mabel said, "They always had a program that was enjoyable. The program always gave you something to take home and think about. I enjoyed meeting our many friends each convention time. We had a close friendship with many people."

She recalled that she went "wherever the ladies went." Indeed, Ruth recalls that once it got very late and Mabel did not return to her room. Getting worried, Ruth went out looking, and found her in a "Pennsylvania" suite with many other women, still talking. Mabel says, "We didn't get finished. We liked each other so much. We learned a lot too. I have good memories."

One of Mabel's continuing delights is reading the breed publications, and she noted, "We didn't stop any publications." She says that she often recognizes the names of children of friends of theirs who are continuing the Holstein dairy business.

The Norman Rishels were well known in Holstein circles, and Mabel retains a copy of the August, 1948 issue of "The Pennsylvania Holstein," which features Lauxmont Admiral Dorana.

Dorana was classified Excellent and at 10 years had a 365 day, 2 x record of 20,198 pounds of milk, 4.4 percent and 881 pounds of fat. She was sired by Admiral Lauxmont and one of her sons, Rag Apple Mark Galaxy, was at Southeastern Artificial Breeders Cooperative.

In 1928 the Rishels had the first place herd in milk and fat production in York County. Their herd numbered up to 38. Their farm was located near York.

In 1929, they were named Pennsylvania Master Farmers, and, to this day, Mabel treasures the Master Farmer medallion which was awarded them for the honor.

Mabel is also well known throughout Pennsylvania for the part she played in establishing the first Farm Women Society in York County on March 6, 1930, in her home. The gathering was an outgrowth of having attended the Pennsylvania Society of Farm Women annual convention during Farm Show and being impressed with their good work. Twenty-six became charter members of Society 31, electing Mabel president. She eventually also worked as a county president and as a state president.

The York County Farm Women Cookbook is dedicated to her, and above her picture is a quote which summarizes much of her life: "There is no end to the good that can be done if you care not who gets the credit."

Mabel claims she met a lot of wonderful people through her work with Holstein cattle, and though the work was often hard, she says, "We didn't think about it because we had friends who were all doing the same." Mabel said that everything got easier over the years, including going to conventions, because "you knew what to expect."

Mabel Richel, 96, looks over the latest issue of "Profiles," the magazine of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association. Named to the Hall of Fame in 1983, Mabel no longer lives on a farm, but continues her interest in Holsteins and enjoys her good memories of attending conventions.

DRUG RESIDUES

The Tissue Residue Branch at the Center for Veterinary Medicine recently performed a study on tissue residues. The purpose was to compile data by slaughter class, residues found, method of administration and primary reasons. From the 134 tissue residue follow-up reports submitted, 151 tissue residues were determined. Some of the tissues studied contained more than one residue. Due to lack of information on some of the reports, only 57% of the samples submitted were used for data analysis.

The common means of administering drugs were IM injection (36%), intramammary infusion (18%), or orally fed (45%) via water, bolus or tablet. When this information was separated by slaughter class, all of the reports for intramammary infusions and 78% of those studied for IM injection resulted in residues found in cull dairy cows. Drugs administered orally resulted in 62% of the residues found in bob veal calves and 24% of the market hogs studied. Sulfamethazine was the drug most commonly found in hog and calf tissues. Other drugs found to be a problem with the calves were neomycin, streptomycin and tetracyclines.

Three reasons were most frequently listed as causes for residues. Failure to observe the withdrawal time attributed to 51% of the residues in tissues. The use of an unapproved drug (17%) and poor or no records (12%) were the other major reasons. Other causes for residues ranged from exceeding the recommended dosage, mistaken use of dry cow treatment during lactation, or accidentally selling known medicated animals for food.

COWS MUST EAT

If cows don't eat they don't give milk! Wintertime problems often affect feed consumption. Typical problems include poor or nonexistent ventilation, slippery floor surfaces, and the lack of high quality drinking water.

Water systems must be protected during the winter. Tubs and troughs exposed to freezing temperatures must be heated or well insulated. Small openings and/or covers, that animals can move, will reduce heat loss from the surface of the waterer. Ice covered troughs or tubs contaminated with manure do not encourage water consumption. Water lines and pumps that supply cow drinkers must also be protected from freezing. This may include burying, insulating pipes or using heat tapes or heat lamps on pipes or pumps. Use thermostats to automatically operate electric heat devices to save electricity.

High humidity air in poorly ventilated barns will increase chances of pneumonia. Wet foul smelling barns also result in reduced feed palatability. All barns with livestock require air exchange even on the coldest day of the year — this includes your barn! Ammonia released from manure packs on a mild winter day can result in respiratory problems in poorly ventilated barns.

Slips and falls result in injuries and discourage animals from moving to feed and water. Areas of poor footing, such as smooth concrete and sloping yards, are worse during freezing, snowy weather. Use of sand, gravel, or other grit can alleviate these problems for the short term. Particular areas to watch include areas around waterers where spilled water forms ice, north sides of feed bunks, doorways under eaves that drip and entrance and exit areas to parlors. Long range solutions include grooving existing concrete and installing new concrete with grooves. Heating mats embedded in concrete around waterers and parlor doors may also be considered for new construction. Lowering water levels in waterers can reduce spillage.

Details, such as providing good ventilation year round, plenty of water and good footing may be the difference between a profit and a loss on milk production this

Guernsey Bulls Look Better Than Ever

Guernsey bulls are looking better than ever with January Production Type Index (PTI) figures at an all-time high. In just one year, active-AI Guernsey sires have progressed from no bulls over +250 PTI to five sires ranging from +255 to +309 PTI.

Since the January 1987 sire summary, Guernseys have also made remarkable strides in other areas. Where only one bull was listed as having a 1/87 Predicted Difference for Milk (PDM) over +1,000, now eight bulls are over +1,000 PDM. Eleven Guernsey sires have Predicted Difference for Cheese Yield Dollars over $100, in contrast to only two from one year ago. Finally, 15 proven sires have PD's for Dollar Value (PD$) over $100 as compared to just six last January.

As recorded by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), the current active-AI predicted difference average for 39 bulls is +789M +31F +$97 +20P +$91CY, PDT +0.7, PTI +184.

Although increases from January 1987 figures were noted in all categories, most impressive were the 90-unit increase in PDM, 34-unit rise in PTI and the 16-unit gain in PD$.

Commenting on the notable genetic gains of the breed, Erick Metzger, executive secretary-treasurer of the American Guernsey Association (AGA), said, "The tremendous improvement is due to increased organized young-sire sampling efforts. This line up of bulls offers Guernsey breeders diverse pedigrees along with high predicted differences. The top five bulls have five different sires and four different maternal grandsires. Also, the top three sires have repeatabilities over 70 percent."

The American Guernsey Association is the national organization for the registration and promotion of Guernsey cattle and is headquartered in Columbus, Ohio.

New Report Offers Information

In today's tight farm economy, dairy farmers must strive to produce the most milk per cow at the least cost to their farm operation. Dairy Herd Improvement (DHI) services are tools farmers can use to track the results of their management tactics to see if their efforts are economical.

DHI and the Dairy Records Processing Laboratory at Cornell University have introduced a completely revised report, called the Dairy Herd Profile, which summarizes and analyzes herd management performance. The analysis can be done either on a monthly basis or twice a year, according to the member's preference.

The report was also developed in conjunction with the NYS Extension Service, specifically through the work of Dr. Terry R. Smith, NYS Extension Dairyman.

This report allows DHI members to analyze their success in areas such as reproductive performance, somatic cell count (a measure of milk quality), and genetic progress, as well as milk, milkfat, and milk protein production.

Problem areas show up clearly on the Dairy Herd Profile, and farmers can then work with consultants, such as feed representatives and veterinarians, to improve their herd preformance. Subsequent Dairy Herd Profile reports will chart the progress in this particular area to tell the farmer if his or her herd management changes worked.

The new Dairy Herd Profile not only offers DHI members expanded services, but sets a new level of standards for dairy herd management record in the United States.

Penn State Offers Agricultural Information

Owners of home computers with modems can now electronically get current information for use right on the farm from the Extension Service. PENpages, a computer-based library that the public can access free of charge provides up-to-date information on a variety of agricultural subjects. PENpages includes daily, weekly and monthly reports on dairy, livestock, water quality, horticulture and pesticides from Extension specialists in the College of Agriculture. Other contributers to the system include the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA).

"It's a whole world of information right at your fingertips," said Greene County resident Kelly Cratty. Cratty logs onto PENpages from his home computer to access horticulture information.

Harold Schantz of Schantz Orchards in Lehigh County uses PENpages for updates on pest information and spraying schedules. "I find it a necessity during the growing season," Schantz said.

Dan Griffith, Indiana County dairy farmer and PENpages user, said he accesses the system several times a week, especially for the daily news summary and Ag A.M. provided by the USDA. Ag A.M. is a summary of agricultural news as reported in the major media and trade publications. "I couldn't get that information somewhere else," Griffith said. "Our paper just doesn't carry that kind of stuff."

Griffith also used the reference section of PENpages. In addition to news items and alerts, PENpages contains over 2,500 reference documents dealing with agriculture topics like dairy farming and livestock production.

PENpages is available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Anyone with access to a computer, modem and appropriate software can log on to the system. A telephone number in each county means that Pennsylvania residents can access PENpages with no phone charges, unless it is a long distance call to their county extension office. PENpages can be accessed using most home computers. Pennsylvania residents can get a free PENpages User Guide, Version 3.0 from the Penn State Cooperative Extension or by calling 757-9657. The User Guide gives software and hardware specification as well as step-by-step instruction for logging onto PENpages, PENpages was designed for easy use. Schantz noted that he had no problem logging on from his home computer. "I'm not a real computer buff," he admitted, "but it's simple to use, and it keeps getting easier."

THE VALUE OF DHI RECORDS

While DHIA members appreciate the value of production and management records, some information is more beneficial than others. In a recent survey, Wisconsin cooperators ranked the various record systems on the basis of usefulness of the information in management of the dairy. The results of the survey are shown in Table 1.

Table 1

| Management Information | % Response-Yes |
|---|---|
| Reproduction | 91 6 |
| Improve production | 91 8 |
| Feeding | 89 1 |
| Culling | 81 5 |
| Health | 76 9 |
| Identification | 69 7 |
| Sales | 52 2 |

The greatest value of the reproductive information is that it identifies potential problems such as, cows and heifers not yet bred and animals to pregnancy check. Failure to breed back on time doesn't result in sick cows or low production — it simply reduces net income. The area of "improve production" is vividly demonstrated by comparing DHI cows with non-tested cows. In the U.S., this difference is about 5,000 lb. of milk per cow per year.

MOST PENNSYLVANIA ICE CREAM IS TOPS

Prices of one-half gallon vanilla ice cream samples purchased from Pennsylvania stores varied from $1.69 to almost $4.00. These prices reflected the composition of milkfat and total solids and quality of vanilla flavor. There is a price, flavor and body to satisfy everyone. Generally the higher priced products were the highest in milkfat and total solids and only pure vanilla was used for flavoring.

Results of testing and evaluation on 221 samples were sent to manufacturers. Net weights averaged about 2.40 pounds per half gallon and 85% of the samples were above 2.25 pounds. Milkfat content varied from about 10% to as high as 16% with an average of about 11.0%. Total solids content ranged from about 36% to more than 42%, but averaged about 39%. Flavor, body and texture evaluations were made.

Trained dairy product judges rated 82% of the flavors in the acceptable to excellent range while 88% of the body and texture comments were acceptable to excellent. Generally, you get what you pay for, the higher the price, the better the flavor, body and texture.

PENNSYLVANIA MILK BEST IN NORTHEAST

During 1987, 2,343 samples of milk were purchased from 602 stores in Pennsylvania. When compared to 455 samples from other northeastern states, Pennsylvania milk was the best. This was true even though many of the PA processing plants are small and the data includes samples from about 70 farm jugging operations. All samples were kept refrigerated and tested within 48 hours of purchase.

Only 13% of the PA stores had milk in the dairy case at a temperature above 45 degrees, the regulatory maximum. Forty-seven percent of the stores had milk at 40 degrees or below. Pennsylvania had a five percent advantage for temperatures of 40 degrees or less and had four percent fewer stores in the 45 degrees and above category.

There were five percent fewer objectionable flavor samples in the PA milk. Strong rancid flavor accounted for about half of the samples rated poor for taste for both in and out-of-state samples. There were five percent fewer objectionable flavor samples in 1987 compared to 1986.

Bacterial quality was similar for PA and Northeastern samples. Ninety percent of them met the state regulatory maximums. Total solids values were lower in the other northeastern states but PA had six percent of the samples below the minimum of 11.5% compared to 3 percent for the other states.

Young Farmer Spokesperson Tells Value Of Program

GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Adams Co. Correspondent

GETTYSBURG — "The real value of this program is that it provides an opportunity for the farming community to reach its neighbors who may now be a generation removed from the farm... It could be used at the State Cornucopia Dinner, Ag Progress Days, and so many other media events that we already have in place." These are Melinda Johnston's thoughts as she retires this week as Pennsylvania's 1987 Young Farmer Spokesperson for Agriculture.

Johnston represented Pennsylvania in early December in the national contest held this year in Peoria, Illinois. The contest, in its 13th year, is sponsored by Elanco Products Company, and is held in conjunction with the National Young Farmer Educational Institute.

A new representative from PA will be named this week at the State Convention of Young Farmers and that person will compete next December in Ohio.

Johnston recalls becoming interested in the program when another local winner encouraged her to consider entering. The contest requires a five-minute presentation on one of four topics. These topics include: (1) Discuss how farm exports benefit urban consumers; (2) the use of fertilizers, chemicals, and feed additives as important tools; (3) stewardship of the land; or (4) How to get the most from your food dollar.

Following the presentation, the contestant is then given a 5 minute question period on their chosen topic, when competing on the state level. In national competition, the question period is ten minutes long and the questions can pertain to any aspect of agriculture.

Holding a degree in Home Economics and a minor in Communications from James Madison University in Virginia, Johnston was readily attracted to the topic of "How To Get The Most From Your Food Dollar." She explained, "I had a strong background in public speaking and this topic seemed tailored to my interest. When I was in school there was a real rise in consumer economics. That interest is still very strong and this was an area that drew on my expertise."

In addition to her education background, Melinda drew on her farming background to flavor her presentation as well. Her family operates Mason-Dixon Farms, Gettysburg. The operation includes a 1200 cow dairy herd, a large cropping operation, and a milk processing and distribution plant.

Melinda's husband Tom now works in crop management and production for the Mason-Dixon operation. Prior to returning to the home operation Melinda worked for three years for the PSU Extension Service and Tom was Executive Director of the Lancaster County Conservation District. They have four children ages three through nine.

Johnston also feels that their work experience away from the farm colored their perceptions of farm management problems and career choices. She states, "We've had a chance to see of the advantages and disadvantages of farming either big or small. We've also had a chance to see how much people are losing touch with agriculture. We're involved in a lot of activities where we might be the only farm couple there. We're the only representative of what used to be a majority occupation."

She added, "At the national level of competition, three winners are chosen and they are taken on a media blitz. They do radio and T.V. shows, have a lot of press coverage in national newspapers, and make several public appearances. On the state level we need more coordination to utilize our spokesperson more effectively." She envisions a committee with representation from the State Young Farmers Association, the spokesperson, and someone from that person's local chapter to work together.

Addressing the concerns of agriculture today and for tomorrow, Johnston lists several areas that farmers need to become involved with in conjunction with their urban neighbors and consumers. She lists land conservation as a top priority followed by the protection of underground water purity as her top concerns. She also stresses the need for American agriculture to remain American owned and operated.

Johnston encourages more participation in the contest and utilization of the winners as a means improved communications between the agricultural and urban communities. She states, "Pennsylvania should have more participation in this program. The state winner gets their way paid to the national convention and you get to talk with other young farmers there from all over the country. It's a very good program."

Melinda Johnston, Gettysburg, poses with the plaque she received as the 1987 Young Farmers Spokesperson for Agriculture. Her topic at the state and national level was, "How to Get the Most From Food Dollar." While Johnston ends her tenure in this position this week, she stresses the need for better utilization of an agricultural spokesperson at state and local media events.

Blue Ball National Bank Loan Seminar

BLUE BALL — A farm financial consultant told approximately 200 persons at the Blue Ball National Bank seminar last week loan structure problems have come from specialty operations like large farrow-to-finish hog complexes and large layer operations.

Ron Bard, Quarryville, said large loans were extended for too long a period of time where internal equipment deteriorated faster than debt was reduced. Therefore, a crisis could occur to borrow money for a large investment in equipment when the previous equipment loan was only half paid off. Bard said some of the things that create poor financial management include: lack of records, improper debt structure, keeping up with the Jones and getting bigger before getting better.

According to Bard the farmer should expect his banker to know

Charles Benner, president of the state council, likened the growth of Pennsylvania agriculture to the old farm deeds that include specific linear directions plus the throw of the ax. If you throw a little further, you own a little more land," Benner said. "This is the way agriculture got to be number one in Pennsylvania. The farmer, the agribusiness person and the legislator all are willing to work that extra throw when needed to be successful."

Lieutenant Governor Mark Singel brought greetings from Governor Robert Casey in an official document that saluted those with a commitment to the growth of agriculture in Pennsylvania. "The Commonwealth is blessed with an abundance of natural resources, and we must maintain a strong program to preserve these resources for future generations," Casey said.

Singel said you must know that this administration has a tremendous commitment to preserving and enhancing agriculture. "Agriculture produces jobs for 55,000 farmers who produce $3 billion worth of products," Singel said. "One out of every five Pennsylvania jobs depends on agriculture. So it is clear we must maintain an active focus to preserve opportunities to enhance agriculture in the state."

Singel said that 2.2 million Pennsylvanians are considered to be rural inhabitants. This is the largest rural population of any state in the nation. "We are very serious about our commitment to agriculture. It is more than just a slogan. It is a practical approach to an industry that really is the backbone of Pennsylvania's economy," Singel concluded.

Special recognition was given to the following firms who donated food items for the legislative food baskets: Daniel Weaver Co., Lebanon bologna; Hershey Foods, Hershey bars; Holly Milk Cooperative, butter; Knouse Foods, applesauce; Milk Marketing Inc., cheese; Myers Canning, mushrooms; Pa. Poultry Federation, eggs; Pa. State Beekeepers Assn., honey bears; Pa. Wine Association, wine and Pro-Fac Cooperative, potato chips.

Taxes — Focusing In On Preproductive Expenses

BY KARL BERGER
Special Correspondent

"Are you electing not to capitalize certain preproductive period expenses?"

Forget about the loss of the capital gains exclusion or the new limits on the use of prepaid expenses to reduce taxable income. The question that the Internal Revenue Service poses on Schedule F of the 1987 tax return may be the most important choice many farmers, particularly dairymen, face this filing season, according to several tax specialists.

The new rules on preproductive expenses are among the most controversial created by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. Farm groups across the country are crying foul and lobbying hard to have them changed. In the meantime, however, individual farmers and their tax preparers must wrestle with a complex calculation that could have consequences for many years to come.

The rules establish new capitalization requirements for assets, such as dairy or beef cows, that take more than two years to develop. It's also no longer possible to slip in such livestock under the two-year limit, because the IRS has decided the preproductive period begins at the time of breeding, not birth.

Under the old tax code, most farmers simply lumped feed, veterinary bills and other heifer-raising costs together with those of the cow herd and deducted them as expenses in the year in which they occurred. The new rules require dairymen to separate these costs (including an appropriate share of overhead) and, generally, to set them aside in a capital account that can be depreciated when a heifer begins to produce milk.

The option to continue deducting these costs as a current-year expense still exists for the vast majority of farmers who use cash accounting, but there is a major catch. Doing so will force farmers to use what the IRS calls the "alternative depreciation system," a slower, straight-line method, on all assets placed in service in 1987 and, probably, subsequent years as well. Under this system, single-purpose farm structures, for instance, will take 15 years to write off rather than the seven years allowed by the current rapid depreciation system known as MACRS. Most machinery will take 10 rather than seven years.

The choice, on both preproductive expenses and, hence, depreciation, appears all but irrevocable under current regulations, according to tax specialists. Farmers can change methods only with the written permission of the IRS, an unlikelihood, they said.

The difference between the two depreciation systems apparently is enough to make many local dairymen choose the capitalization route. Donald Hull, who runs a tax preparation service for farmers in Carroll County, Md., said recently all of the dairymen he's helped to date have opted to capitalize despite the extra accounting work involved and the reduction in write-offs this year because expenses are so much less. (After several years, when the heifer depreciation schedules now being established are in full swing, this difference should disappear, according to the specialists.)

Actually figuring the cost of raising heifers is a problem for most farmers, who lack such detailed records. However, the IRS has okayed the use of two standard inventory systems — the farm-price method and the unit-livestock-price method — although farmers must be prepaid to justify the figures they use.

Under the farm-price system, the cost of raising a heifer is valued at its market price less the cost of trucking, commissions and other marketing charges. To obtain market prices, Dave Swartz, an Extension agent in Chester County, Pa., has suggested that farmers simply can clip out several market reports from a nearby auction. Other advisors are more skeptical.

Under the unit-livestock-price system, heifers can be grouped by age and a standardized cost assigned to each group, according to Don Hummel, a tax specialist with the Pennsylvania Farmers Association's Farm Management Service. A farmer using such a system could assign $100, for instance, as the cost of any heifers between zero and six months old on Dec. 31. He could add another $150 for those six to 12 months old, $250 for 12-18 months and $300 for 18-24 months. The total, $800, is within reasonable limits.

"We think it costs between $700 and $1,000, or maybe more, to bring a heifer into production. If you're way off from that, you may be in trouble," Hummel said.

Hull suggested an interesting variation on this system. He's been advising his clients to calculate their total heifer-raising days (as of a Dec. 31 inventory) and then simply multiply this figure by a cost of $1 a day, a figure justified by university research, he said.

Unfortunately, even the farmers who choose not to capitalize must be worried about these costs. Many farm tax advisors, interpreting IRS fine print, say those who expense these costs must be prepared to treat their animals as Section 1245 property when they are sold, say as cull cows. Because this section requires an estimation of the amount that otherwise would have been depreciated, these farmers, too, must worry about heifer-raising costs.

Choosing between the two alternatives is proving to be a costly, time-consuming accounting job in itself. In general, farmers who raise a lot of replacement heifers and who plan on little investment in new capital assets may be better off not capitalizing, especially with the Section 179 deduction increased to $10,000 for 1987. The reverse would be true for dairymen in the opposite boat. But the specialists say that each individual case is different.

Complicating the task even more is the possibility that Congress might change the rules (and perhaps revoke the alternative depreciation requirement for farmers who didn't capitalize this year). Lobbyists for the National Cattlemen's Association, the National Milk Producers Federation and other farm groups are trying to have preproductive expenses returned to their previous status in a tax-correction bill now working its way through Congress. Although optimistic, officials such as NMPF's Jim Barr say there are no guarantees.

Chances are, you'll replace this heifer before you replace this alfalfa stand.

Like animals, your alfalfa's most productive years are numbered.

Once past its prime, a cow or alfalfa can cost you more than it's worth.

That's why it pays to put your money into things that are bred to perform over the years—like Pioneer® brand alfalfa varieties.

Pioneer varieties provide long stand life. So, while some alfalfa stands begin to thin out and weeds begin to take over, stands of Pioneer varieties remain thick and leafy—giving you more protein for more good years.

For alfalfa stands that weather the years well, talk to your Pioneer sales representative about Pioneer brand alfalfa.

526

One of the most winterhardy varieties on the market. It features outstanding resistance to Bacterial Wilt, good resistance to Fusarium Wilt and produces impressive yields. The first cutting is a bit later than with 531 or 532.

531

Tolerates Anthracnose infestations and fights off Fusarium and Bacterial Wilt. First cutting is early, and the fine stemmed, leafy plants bounce back fast after harvest.

For a longer, better stand.

Save during Pioneer Days (Feb. 22-27 only). Take advantage of special discounts, plus a $10 coupon from Pioneer to get 526 for just $126.90/ bag, and 531 for $129.72/bag.

Government Has Interest-Free Loan From Farmers

CAMP HILL — "Pennsylvania farmers can't afford an interest-free, $10 million loan to the Federal Government just because Congress goofed," said Keith W. Eckel, president of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA), "We can't afford that kind of mistake.

"The government is saying to us: We know you're exempt from this tax, but we goofed. So you pay it, and then we'll refund your money," Eckel said. "That's darn poor business, and one that farmers in Pennsylvania can't afford."

The state farm leader was referring to a provision of the recently enacted Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987, which requires farmers to pay a 15-cent per gallon excise tax on diesel fuel that they are not required to pay for off-highway agricultural use. Congress switched the collection point for the diesel fuel excise tax from the retail to the wholesale level beginning April 1.

So, now the farmer is required to pay the 15-cent tax up front, and later file for a refund either on a quarterly or annual basis. The farmer qualifies for a quarterly refund if he pays at least $1,000 a quarter in diesel fuel tax, otherwise he can only file annually for the refund.

Farmers are substantial users of diesel fuel. According to the 1982 agricultural census, farmers nationwide used nearly three billion gallons of diesel fuel on the farm. That translates into a $420 million tax collection from farmers which the government would hold interest-free until the refunds are made.

"Pennsylvania's share would be approximately $10 million this year," Eckel said, "which no matter how you look at it is a windfall for the federal treasury."

Eckel explained that the law allows the U.S. Treasury Secretary to exempt certain groups of users such as diesel-powered trains, commercial aviation, state and local governments from paying the tax at the time of purchase, so our question is, "Why not do the same for farmers?".

This week PFA is holding a series of meetings around the state to enlist farmer help in a letter writing campaign to Pennsylvania congressmen and senators to rescind that provision of the law.

There are presently six bills in the Congress, one in the Senate (S.2003) and five in the House (HR 3844, 3850, 3865, 3866 and 3881), which would correct the situation, according to Eckel.

PFA is a voluntary, statewide farm organization representing 23,443 farm families. It is affiliated with the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Biotechnology At Alfred State

BY
WALLACE A. MacDONALD
Professor of Animal Husbandry
Alfred State College

ALFRED — The waiting has begun again. Following three earlier embryo transfers and the births of seven embryo transfer (ET) calves the students at Alfred State College have recently assisted in another stage of the ongoing saga of biotechnology in the college's Purebred Holstein herd.

Currently eight cows and heifers are serving as surrogates, carrying calves which were transplanted from three other donor cows. Six of these embryos had been frozen for several months after their recovery from cows in earlier embryo flushes.

How, then, are the students themselves involved since the actual removal of eggs and eventual introduction into the recipient's uterus is performed by a commercial firm?

To begin with, a target date is set. This is usually established well in advance so that all preliminary activities can be synchronized and implemented in a timely fashion.

The recipient animals must be observed to assure that their estrous cycles are normal and regular. It is essential that they be in the same stage of their cycle as is any donor cow. Since the eggs are transferred a week after insemination, all recipients must be estrous synchronized.

Students, then, administer the hormone injections to accomplish this. During this whole preparation period the management and physiological considerations and activities are thoroughly discussed in classes.

On the day of transfer, students prepare the barn and recipient animals. They must be cleaned and the animals disinfected thoroughly since implantation to date has required minor surgery.

Although twelve recipients were prepared, one was, upon examination, considered unacceptable and eleven received embryos either freshly collected or from those frozen. About 45 days later all are examined and 8 were confirmed pregnant. And so the waiting goes on. July should produce the ultimate test - the calves. And with that, plans for the next class project in embryo transfer will begin.

Soil Saving Conservation Tillage Increases in 1987

HARRISBURG — Conservation tillage continues to grow in popularity with Pennsylvania farmers. Crops planted by conservation tillage methods in 1987 was 50 percent as compared to 45 percent the year before.

According to Frederick Bubb, USDA Soil Conservation Service, conservation tillage is effective in reducing erosion when used alone on gentle slopes. On steeper slopes, it is used in combination with other soil conservation practices such as terraces.

In 1987, 1,018,000 acres out of 2,021,000 acres were planted by conservation tillage in the Spring of 1987. Crops planted by conservation tillage included 871,000 acres of full season corn, 76,000 acres of spring grain, and 71,000 acres of soybeans.

According to Bubb, conservation tillage includes several methods of tillage including chisel plowing, ridge tillage and no-till. Bubb said that residue cover is the prime factor in determining the effectiveness of the practice in saving soil. "With residue covering 80 percent of the ground, such as with a good growth of corn stalks, soil erosion can be reduced by as much as 80-90 percent on gentle slopes."

Information on conservation tillage is available from the Soil Conservation Service or Cooperative Extension office in your county.

and be committed to agriculture. And the bank should expect his farm customer to develop financial statements for each year and arrange for credit in advance of need or prior to purchase.

Joseph Myers, trust officer for the host bank, told farmers about retirement plans. Self-employed farmers may deposit up to 15 percent of the 1987 profit by April 15, 1988, according to Myers. This would be done in a tax-deferred retirement plan called a Simplified Employee Pension Plan (SEP) if they are not exempt from social security taxes. Some religious sects are exempt from paying social security taxes and therefore cannot have an SEP. The set deposit is a current business expense, which reduces taxable profit. The funds are deposited into an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). No taxes are paid on the deposits or interest until the funds are withdrawn from the IRA. There is no

Russian Visitors

including mushrooms which were just three days from harvesting. Even more interest was shown in the composting operation, where they saw the hay, horse manure, chicken manure and corn cobs which go into the rich compost used to grow mushrooms.

One group of the Moldavian visitors went to the ultra-modern poultry operation of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Espenshade, Mount Joy, where they saw the collection of some of the ½ million eggs produced daily by the 650,000 layers in seven houses. Host Tom Creighton said the Moldavians were fascinated by the computer operation which can be handled with 10 workers.

They also visited the hog farm of Mr. and Mrs. David Hess, where 1,000 hogs are fed out. Again, Creighton said the visitors were amazed that Hess worked full time for the Espenshades as well as serving as pastor for Mount Hope Mennonite Church.

The entire group also had the opportunity to visit Hershey, Longwood Gardens, the Capitol, West Chester University, Lampeter Strasburg School and the Court House. Although the schedule was full, many visited the workplaces of their hosts, local supermarkets, Central Market, Park City and attended church with their hosts.

It was a learning experience for both visitors and hosts, but many of the visitors remarked that the countryside and the agriculture was similar to Moldavia.

Rabies Is In Lebanon County

Farmers can vaccinate their animals themselves. Sammons warned farmers, however, against using modified-live vaccinations intended for cats and dogs on cattle. This vaccination will cause rabies in cattle rather than prevent it.

If a farmer looses an animal that he vaccinated himself, he will not receive indemnity money. However, if a veterinarian vaccinates the animal or if no vaccination is administered and the animal dies, the government will pay 90 percent of the animal's worth.

Although rabies' symptoms vary greatly, Sammons said that drooling, abnormal aggression, and a limp tail often characterize the disease.

"It is very important to keep children away from animals that are acting strange or wild," Sammons stated. "Be aware that it will take three years for the disease to move out of the area."

If a farmer suspects a wild animal is rabid, he should kill it with a chest shot and bring the head to Summerdale Lab, where it will be tested free of charge.

The law allows farmers to kill wild animals on their property that are suspected of having the disease. This law doesn't extend to dogs or cats. In the cases where a dog or cat seems to have rabies, Sammons advised farmers to call the dog warden, unless the animal is of immediate threat.

No spreader on the market can match the versatility of Scavenger.™

A new look in spreader design.

More than 7 years ago, Hedlund/Martin introduced the Scavenger—a manure spreader based on an entirely new technology.

Gone were unreliable apron chains and "rooster comb" beaters. Gone were leaky endgates. Gone were the old-fashioned boxy shape. In their place—a unique patented square auger and side-discharge expeller reel. And with its welded Unibody construction, Scavenger looked like nothing before.

But even though it looked unusual, Scavenger worked. Scavenger proved itself where it counts—in the fields of farmers all across America.

And like all successful advances in technology, Scavenger invited a slew of competitors. Today, a wide variety of farm equipment manufacturers sell a Scavenger-like machine.

Unmatched performance.

While some of these look-alike units are perfectly adequate for certain manure-spreading application, none can match Scavenger's overall versatility. Scavenger spreads all kinds of manure—liquid, semi-solid, pen pack (even frozen)—all year 'round. In even spread patterns up to 50 feet. All in one machine.

So when you find it's time to purchase a new spreader, take a hard look at your choices. Don't be misled by spreaders that claim to do it all. Compare actual capabilities. We think you'll find your choice obvious. You'll choose the spreader with unmatched performance—Scavenger.

See for yourself.

For a firsthand look at Scavenger, see your local Hedlund/Martin dealer. Or write: Hedlund/Martin, Inc., A Gehl Company, 741 Kutztown Road, Myerstown, PA 17067. Telephone: 717-933-4151.

Atlantic Breeders Cooperative Expands Districts For Better Financial Returns

BY PAT PURCELL

MOUNT JOY — Due to a recent expansion of district boundaries, Atlantic Breeders Cooperative members will be enjoying a greater return on their dollars, according to Gary Heckman and Clyde Martin, ABC representatives.

Martin, the district #4 director, told members gathered at the Country Table in Mount Joy, Tuesday evening for the annual meeting, that exisiting boundaries have been expanded to included northeastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, parts of West Virginia, Maryland and Ohio. There are still only 16 districts in the cooperative. This move offers the advantage of membership to all customers.

"The benefits of having new members mean higher returns in your RFC's coming back directly to you," said Heckman. "You could see an increase of 2 to 3 cents more per dollar you spent."

Heckman also predicted that ABC members will see a lower breeding service bill in 1988 than in 1987 due to an effort to keep the quality of genetics stronger than ever, but keeping costs down. ABC increased semen sales in 1987 by 168 percent and Heckman reported January was an excellent month allowing ABC to finish way ahead of budget.

Many members were selected for production awards. Their herd production average was atleast 10 percent above the state production average and atleast two-thirds of the herd was ABC sired. Awards went to:

— Martin and Clair Good, 84% ABC, 44 cows, 19,287MP, 703F.

— Wilmer Stoltzfoos, 65%, 45 cows, 19,805MP, 709F.

— Edwin K. Wise, 95%, 35 cows, 21,242MP, 713F.

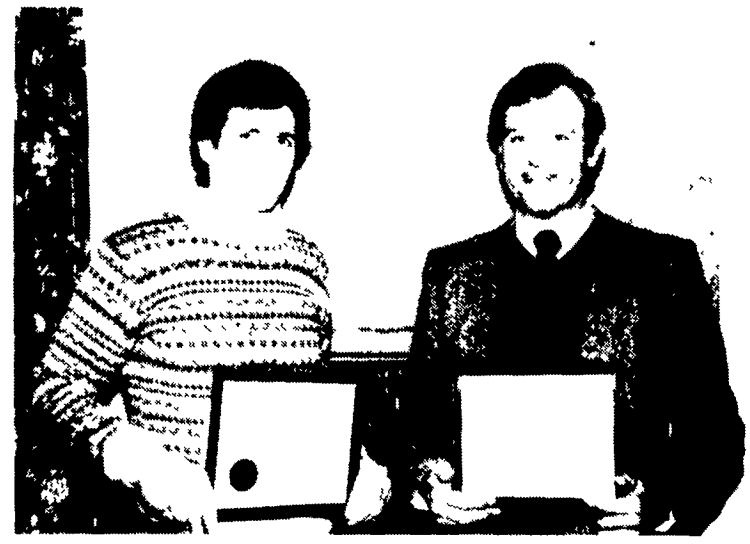
Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Dairy Extension Specialist, commended farmers with the progress made in production in this county and contributing to the growth of the dairy industry while other areas are experiencing a decline in dairying.

Shirk reminded farmers that the past dry growing season can have definite effects on the quality of forages making it very important for the farmer to have his forage tested for composition. Testing forages is the only way farmers can be sure of what they are feeding.

In light of the recent tax law change Shirk urged farmers to give a great deal of thought to their preproductive expenses this year.

"It's a rough decision. Whether you decide to capitalize expenses or not, you must be sure it is right for your operation becauseyou will have to live with it for a very long time. If you do nothing, the government will chose for you and as a result will deny you some important options," explained Shirk.

The capitalized expenses will be deducted when the heifers begin to produce, but until then it will take some complicated record keeping on the farm operators part.



Atlantic Breeders Cooperative will meet next Tuesday, Feb. 16, 7 p.m. at the Hoffman Building in Quarryville and also on Thursday, Feb. 18, 7 p.m. at the Blue Ball Firehall.

30 YEARS AGO
THIS WEEK

— Hatcheryman Jay R. Greider, R1 Mt Joy, was named to head the recently merged Poultry Association at a meeting of the board of directors held Thrusday night at the Poultry Center.

Other officers elected by the directors were: vice president, Noah Kreider, R3 Manheim; secretary, Daniel K. Good, R1 Columbia; and treasurer Eugene S. Cassel, Lania Drive, Landisville.

— Drought effects show themselves in peculiar ways. This was proved again at a meeting of celery growers held Monday afternoon at the Amos Funk farm, R1 Millersville.

The object in point was black heart in celery. While fairly common in other years, the past season saw the disease in excess of normal occurrence. The reason, said Penn State experts, was an imbalance of nutrients caused by fluctuating water supplies.

— Marlin Cassel, R1 Manheim, and J. David Lapp, R1 Bareville, shared honors at the Red Rose Baby Beef and Lamb Club banquet Friday night.

Cassel was named county champion in the beef division and Lapp had the county and state champion lambs.

Both received trophies and Cassel a gold watch.

— At a meeting for Lancaster County poultrymen, at the Memorial Bldg., Leola, Dr. J. M. Snyder, a poultry specialist for the Beacon Milling Co., Cayuga, N.Y., told farmers that the outlook for egg producers in 1958 was the best it had been since 1953.

— Osborndale Sir Ty Vic Forbes, owned by Southeastern Pennsylvania Artificial Breeding Coop., Lancaster, has been designated a Gold Medal Sire -- the highest recognition a Holstein sire can receive -- by the Holstein-Friesian Assn. of America.

First American Sheep Industry Convention Held

DENVER, CO — Nearly 1,100 sheep producers and industry supporters from across the country attended the industry's first American Sheep Industry Convention in San Antonio, Texas, Jan. 16-20.

This year's "Connections" theme helped to create a positive environment for attendees to share information and ideas on ways to improve sheep production, products and profitability. The high attendance and enthusiastic participation during the four-day program of meetings and informational sessions reflects the strong commitments by producers and individuals from related segments of the sheep industry to work more closely together to achieve common goals.

A primary issue discussed during annual meetings of the National Wool Growers Association, National Lamb Feeders Association and American Sheep Producers Council was consolidation of the three organizations. Each organization voted to further explore the concept.

The objectives of consolidation are to conserve limited resources and improve program effectiveness. The concept was developed by producer leaders at a recent industry long-range planning conference.

Following approval to explore the consolidation concept, organization presidents, Bill Pfluger (NWGA), Edgar Olson (ASPC), and Richard Drake (NLFA) selected an 11-member Industry Consolidation Task Force to develop a consolidation plan. Don Meike from Kaycee, Wyo. was selected as task force chairman. Other members will be announced following notification.

The task force will address the merging issue over the coming year. During this period, preliminary proposals will be presented for review by local, state and national organizations. Recommendations will be presented for consideration at the next industry convention in January 1989.

During business meetings of industry organizations, 1988 officers were elected. ASPC officers include Edgar Olson (Fosston, Minn.), president; Bill Schneemann (Big Lake, Texas), vice-president; and Roy Meek (Draper, Va.), secretary/treasurer. Olson replaces outgoing president Tim Indart (Clovis, Calif.). Jim Magagna (Rock Springs, Wyo.) was selected as Lamb Advisory Committee chairman, and Mike Casabonne (Hope, N.M.) as Wool Advisory Committee chairman.

NLFA officers are Richard Drake (Windsor, Colo.), president; Wayne Crabill (Belle Fourche, S.D.), vice president; and Spence Rule (Brighton, Colo.), secretary/treasurer. Howard Wyman (Bristol, Ill.) retired as NLFA president. New directors are Don Godby (Eaton, Colo.), David Quam (San Angelo, Texas), Mark Broderick (Scotts Bluff, Neb.), and Tim Turner (San Angelo, Texas). The NLFA confirmed dates and site of its 1988 Sheep Industry Leadership school July 25-28 in San Angelo, Texas.

Bill Pfluger (San Angelo, Texas) was re-elected for a second term as NWGA president. Also continuing for second terms are John Paugh (Bozeman, Mont.), vice president; Gene Brune (Fountaintown, Ind.), secretary; and Bill Balden (Danville, Ky.), treasurer.

The NWGA Auxiliary also re-elected its current slate of officers for second-year terms. They include Fern Krehbiel (Hydro, Okla.), president, Toppy Jackson (Ranger, Texas), first vice-president; Aggie Helle (Dillon, Mont.), second vice-president; and Jean Woodard (Maize, Kansas), secretary/treasurer Aggie Helle was selected to coordinate the 1989 Make It Yourself With Wool competition. Toppy Jackson will coordinate the 1988 event.

Unstoppable Asian Mites Endangering U.S. Honey Bees

ITHACA, N.Y. — Parasitic mites from Asia are threatening to wipe out honey bees throughout the United States, not only paralyzing the nation's beekeeping industry, but also hampering pollination of many agricultural crops, according to a Cornell University entomologist.

At stake are several million honey bee colonies that produce about $130 million worth of honey annually. More importantly, the mite infestation could seriously jeopardize the pollination of agricultural crops, the value of which is estimated at $20 billion annually.

The scientist who issued the warning is Professor Roger A. Morse, one of the nation's leading authorities on honey bees. He described the situation as the "most serious" since European honey bees were brought to this continent more than three centuries ago.

He stressed the need to mount major research efforts to meet the new challenge and suggested that countermeasures might include chemical controls and development of honey bee strains that are resistant to the pest.

The mite, whose scientific name is Varroa jacobsoni, is about the size of a pinhead — less than one millimeter (0.4 inch) in length. It has eight legs, a hairy shell and a sharp, two-pronged tongue for feeding. It enters bee hives, attaches itself to bee larvae and sucks blood from its victims. It also attacks pupae as well as adult drone (male) and worker (female) bees.

"If left unchecked, the mites can destroy a whole colony in no time," Morse said.

Mite-infested bees weaken and die prematurely, according to Scott Camazine, a research associate in entomology at Cornell. In a recent study, Morse's research team found that adult bees suffered as much as a 50 percent reduction in longevity even when attacked by only a single mite. Pupae infested with five or more mites lost weight drastically; some of them suffered deformations.

Morse conceded that nothing can stop the mites from overrunning some 3.5 million honey bee colonies, which are owned and operated by 200,000 hobby beekeepers and 1,600 commercial beekeepers.

"We can be sure that within a year — and certainly within two years — they will have overrun all honey bee colonies in the country," he predicted.

All honey bees in the United States are descendants of the European bees Apis mellifera. Honey bees in North America have never encountered the Asian mites before, and therefore "are highly susceptible to the invader," Morse said.

Morse, a professor and chairman of the Department of Entomology in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell, has studied the Asian mite extensively in Brazil over the past several years where it maintains a peaceful coexistence with Africanized bees, known more popularly as the killer bees.

Morse explained that the mite can spread rapidly because honey bees don't always remember the location of their own colonies and therefore often "drift" away and join other colonies. Frequent raids and takeovers of weaker colonies also hasten the spread of the mite.

Moreover, tens of thousands of colonies involving countless honey bees are moved around the country each year to pollinate agricultural crops. According to Morse, California, for example, uses honey bees from 11 states to pollinate almond trees each February. Maine and Massachusetts also rely on a large number of out-of-state bee colonies to pollinate cranberry and blueberry crops.

Varroa originated in Asia. It was first found in Indonesia in 1904, attacking the Asian honey bee Apis cerana. Since then, it has spread all over Asia and other parts of the world, including Europe, North Africa, South America and Central America. It showed up in the Soviet Union as early as 1952. It has been reported that Australia is the only continent that remains free of this mite.

"The Asian mite now is the world's leading pest problem of honey bees," Morse pointed out.

How this pest got into the United States is not known, but it turned up in Wisconsin for the first time in late September 1987. Its presence has since been confirmed in 10 other states — New York, Pennsylvania, Maine, Florida, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, South Dakota, Mississippi and Nebraska.

Morse said that effective countermeasures might include newly developed chemicals designed to kill the Asian mite without harming the honey bee. Fluvalinate, which is known by its trade name Spur, has just been cleared with the Environmental Protection Agency for general use in the United States, Morse reported. The chemical already has been used in Europe for the past several years, thus bringing the mite infestation under control.

In addition to using the chemical-control measure, the Cornell scientist hopes to seek a long-term solution to the problem by developing resistant strains of honey bees through breeding programs.

Lancaster Extension Looks Back On 75 Years

BY SALLY BAIR
and
EVERETT NEWSWANGER

LANCASTER - It was a time for reminiscing and reflection as the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Association held its annual meeting Thursday night, celebrating 75 years of providing Extension education to the citizens of Lancaster County.

The most popular part of the program was a slide presentation filled with nostalgic pictures of Extension programs over the years as well as an update on how the modern Extension Service meets the needs of the community.

The 230 people in attendance were clearly impressed by the part of the narration, which included excerpts from tapes of Floyd "Dutch" Bucher, recalling his early years in Lancaster County. Bucher was the first county agent here, appointed in 1913.

On the tape, now part of the archives at Penn State University, Bucher recalls using the trolley, saddle horses and a bicycle to get around in his first year as a means of keeping down expenses. In 1914, he purchased a motorcycle to help him get around faster, and it was this motorcycle which became a trademark for Bucher. On tape, he admitted that in those early years he sometimes rode his motorcycle through the countryside so that people would see him and think that he was busy and, therefore, had something to offer.

Bucher said he often helped farmers with whatever chore they were doing to show that he was a "dirt farmer" and not just a "book farmer, as they accused me of being."

Bucher also reminisced that he was given $2,200, which was expected to pay the cost of operating the Extension Service for three years.

Retired county agent Max Smith and county Extension director Jay Irwin also narrated parts of the slide show to show programs now being carried out in agriculture, family living and 4-H.

Dr. Wayne Schutjer, associate director of the Cooperative Extension Service at Penn State, brought greetings from the University, saying, "This is a real treat for me to see the depths of tradition in this county."

Schutjer also thanked the members of the state legislature who helped make possible the additional $5 million, which Schutjer said will help us "rebuild our Extension Service." The money will be used to hire more people at the county level, more specialists, offer more travel budgets and upgrade equipment. Schutjer said, "It provides a

Beacon Forage Management Seminar Held

INTERCOURSE — A forage management seminar for farmers by the Beacon Milling Company was held here Tuesday to discuss the technics of mowing, conditioning, baling and storing of hay.

Dick Fuller, consumer products manager for Kemin Industries, said farmers are not here to produce forages, they want to produce milk and meat. "The farmer will not stay in business long today if he cannot get full feed value from his own forages," Fuller said. "To do this, he needs to get all of his hay, including leaves, into the animals in as near the condition it was grown in the fields as possible. You could produce more milk with leaf retention and earlier cutting," Fuller said. Milk production out of the field is increasing digestable energy, protein and dry matter."

"In grains, we are interested in reducing molds and also reducing energy loss from heating," Fuller said. "This is how the farmer can make money."

Stablizers improve palatability and digestability, according to Fuller. Organic acids similar to those used in commercial feeds and foods for human consumption resist spoilage and heating. These compounds also are similar to those in the digestive systems of livestock. Trade names for the Beacon hay stablizers are New Cut Hay Preserve and Hay Preserve IV.

Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff said, "I can relate personally with your pride because Extension is a very important part of me."

Chairman of the County Commissioners James Huber presented a letter of commendation to Jay Irwin, congratulating the Extension Service on its 75th anniversary. Larry Yager, representing the Pennsylvania County Agents' Association, gave Jay Irwin and retired agent Arnold Lueck a Nittany Lion statue, recognizing their receiving the Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of County Agents.

Elected as directors to serve three-year terms were: William A. Dean, Jr., Strasburg; John R. Groff, Leola; Dale R. Hershey, Manheim; P. Kenneth Rohrer, Lancaster; and Connie Rutt, Quarryville.

"Those people not eligible for or not using an SEP should at least keep their excess funds in a savings account or certificates of deposit to keep their money working for them," Myers said.

And Melvin Pankuch, executive vice president, concluded the program. Kenneth Overly, agricultural officer, was in charge of the seminar. # Teaching The Herbal Essence Of Life

BY SALLY BAIR
Lancaster Co. Correspondent

MECHANICSBURG — Twenty-seven years ago Bertha Reppert joined a garden club and heard a speaker talk about herbs as the "spice of life." That speaker changed Bertha's life.

She recalls, "I could hardly wait to get started. It was overwhelming. What she said really struck a fire."

It is this "fire" and love of herbs that Bertha will share with ladies attending the 1988 Pennsylvania Holstein Association convention being held at Willow Valley Family Resort and Convention Center at Willow Street. The ladies luncheon will be on Wednesday, February 24 at the Treadway Inn, and Bertha will speak on "Herbs with Confidence," the title of her second book.

As Bertha became more and more interested in herbs, "carrying the torch" of her mentor, she found herself inundating her friends with herbal gifts. "My house got filled. I was inundating my friends and relatives and they were screaming 'help'".

The result was that she looked for another outlet and opened "The Rosemary House" 20 years ago in May. The shop has been a boon to herb lovers everywhere, offering almost everything anyone could ask for, including a great deal of education on the use of herbs.

The Rosemary House, located at 120 S. Market Street in Mechanicsburg, has become famous for being a well-stocked outlet for herbs, spices, craft materials and plants. Bertha has turned over the daily operation of the store to her daughter, Susanna, so that she can be with her retired husband. She continues to give demonstrations and is still writing.

Susanna grew up in The Rosemary House, coming there every day after school to be with her mother. There were four daughters growing up among the herbs, and now Bertha also has two grandchildren.

Bertha makes it clear that she is delighted with Susanna's interest in the shop, adding, "It's a calling. You have to want to do it."

Bertha's first book, "A Heritage of Herbs," published in 1976, provided information on how herbs have been used in this country. The book deals with plants available to colonial settlers, and what the Indians taught them about native plants. It also mentions which herbs the colonists shipped back to the old country.

After giving a speech at Colonial Williamsburg, the bookstore there stocked this book, which has become a big seller. It is one of the few that deals exclusively with early American herbs and their uses.

A second book, entitled "Herbs with Confidence," is an outgrowth of questions Bertha has been asked at The Rosemary House over the years. It includes 135 recipes, 55 herb crafts and other information to help people better understand ways in which to use herbs.

She adds, "It is very basic, with gardening and recipes and crafts. It is definitely for the beginner, and answers questions we've been asked right here in the shop. There also are many garden plans included."

Betha is very practical in her use of herbs, and she says that people can keep dried herbs in their cupboards indefinitely if they keep the herbs away from bright light, steam or humidity, and air. She says she keeps hers in a dark cupboard in tightly stoppered bottles. "If you want to display your herbs you must use them up," she cautions.

The best way to dry herbs is to hang them, according to Bertha, who adds, "Hang them out of the light because sun destroys color. When the color is gone the flavor is gone." Attic rafters and drying racks are good to use, and the room where they are hung should be hot and dry and relatively dark.

To dry rose petals, Bertha lays them on a sheet on the attic floor.

Bertha says that many people are intimidated by herbs. "They don't know anything about it and they're afraid to use them. They use them with great timidity, and they've read a lot of warnings to the point they're even timid about herb teas, which are something that are quite pleasant and healthy."

Bertha adds, "I try to install confidence and stress the use of herbs for pleasure - to enhance life."

She insists that herbs are as easy to grow as weeds, saying, "They can survive drought, and many of them come from desert areas." Probably the one most important requirement is sunlight, according to Bertha. "They are easy to grow, and it is very satisfying because you get such enormous quantities so quickly."

Bertha says she also likes the idea that you can have herbs year round. She said she has sometimes gone out in January and harvested herbs and revived them by throwing them in a sink full of hot water. "They wake up and have a bouquet."

She says emphatically, "To use them is definitely to love them. The key word is to experiment." Of course, she notes, nothing should be put in the mouth which is potentially dangerous.

She admires the "incredible usefulness" of herbs, saying, "Every-

Bertha stands in front of the "medicinals" that her store carries due to demand. Originally she carried just a few, but demand has been great. Bertha says she never prescribes herbs but many people know just how they want to use them.

Bertha works in the small greenhouse found behind the store in Mechanicsburg. They use the greenhouse primarily to keep some of the herbs over winter. Raised beds in the small "city" garden are used to produce a few herbs for use in the store.

Susanna, left, and Bertha look over Bertha's cookbooks, which are available, autographed, through the store. Bertha will personalize books as well. She has written two books and several booklets about the use of herbs. The Rosemary House in Mechanicsburg is known far and wide as a great source of herbs and information about herbs. Celebrating its 20th year in 1988, the store is now being operated by Bertha's daughter Susanna, while Bertha spends more time with her now-retired husband.

one is a plant with a purpose." Many were used for ancient medicinal purposes and many are still useful today. She cites rosemary as an example of an herb that is useful to the hair. "It stimulates the circulation and will stimulate the growth of hair." Although, Bertha added with a laugh it will not grow hair where there is none. She explains the rosemary can be boiled and that water used with shampoo. "It will help you have really healthy hair. People have done it for centuries."

During her presentation Bertha will demonstrate potpourri making, which she says has gained a hocus-pocus." She said most people have available what is neces-

Essence Of Life

sary, and adds, "Potpourri is a fine, personal product that can be made without any magic."

She said making herb products as gifts is not just a matter of saving money, but "it is sharing something highly personalized. Herbs tie in well with any craft, and have the added blessing of fragrance."

Bertha says a real plus for using herbs in cooking is that they can be extremely delicious in salt-free and sugar-free diets. "It is incredible what herbs do for cooking. I can't imagine a scrambled egg without herbs."

Bertha says she makes her own special blends and has them within reach of the stove. Her husband has been on a salt-free diet for 10 years, and continues to eat deliciously with herbs.

An interesting feature of the store is to create a different product every month. One of their creations was wedding rice with rosemary and rosebuds. The rosemary, Bertha explained, is for remembrance and the rosebuds for love. The creation has been a best seller in the Washington gift shop where Rosemary House products are now available.

One of Susanna's creations of the month was garden herbs and garlic dip, a delicious treat that was taste tested for several months before it was introduced.

Bertha says she is always discovering new herbs and new ways of using old ones. The store offers a wide array of books on the subject of herbs, including Gerard's The Herbal, which was the first book printed on the Gutenberg press after the Bible, according to Bertha.

With spring coming, the shop will soon offer plants to home gardeners, and Bertha notes herbs' usefulness as "companion plants." Planting rue with potatoes will discourage beetles, and basil with tomatoes with discourage "all kinds of things." She says they will sell "thousands" of plants in the spring.

She adds, "It's a way of life - I want everybody to share in it. Not everybody wants to be a gardener, but they can all enjoy herbs."

She admits that her interest in herbs, sparked by her first garden club meeting, "has developed into a lifestyle."

The women who attend the ladies' luncheon at the Holstein convention will share Bertha's account of this lifestyle with ideas to adapt to their own. Tickets are still available and can be purchased from Sue Beshore, 386 Old York Road, New Cumberland, Pa. 17070, until February 19. Tickets must be picked up at the convention registration desk at Willow Valley - none will be available at the Treadway.

Transportation will be provided from Willow Valley to the Treadway, beginning at 9:45 a.m.

Bertha has included the following in the beginning of one book:

"To grow them is to know them.
To know them is to use them.
To use them is to love them.
And then- happily- Herbs become your way of life."

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Remember good ole' Murphy? He's the guy who authored those unofficial - but ultimately reliable - Laws of goof-ups, the golden one being "Anything that can go wrong, will."

With each additional passing year here on the farm, my respect for the accuracy of Murphy's wisdom doubles. So, you can imagine my delight at finding a rundown of some of Murph's rules, as applied to farming, on one of the many new calendars to land on my kitchen table a few weeks back. Unfortunately, I ripped out the rules, and neglected to keep track of which particular calendar they originated in.

Nevertheless, with due credit to whichever ag-business deserves it for printing these, some of these Murphy specials are worth passing along.

"Precise planning, minute attention to detail, and exact timing never succeed like dumb luck." From a farm point of view, and in light of the weather of the past few growing seasons, I figure a well-timed inch of rain is equal to a month's worth of dumb luck.

"By faithfully working eight hours a day, you may eventually be successful enough to work 12 hours a day." Or during planting season, make that 16 hours a day.

"Nothing is as easy as it looks." Especially if it's been computerized.

"Once you open a can of worms, the only way to recan them is to use a larger can." The farmer vouches for this one each time he sets out to repair a small leak on our copper water pipes in the basement. Eventually our copper "can of worms" will be totally replaced with plastic, which offers greater durability against our high-acid water.

"Leftover nuts never match leftover bolts." The same principles which in kitchen use apply to plastic containers and lids.

"Implement dealers always lack just one part - yours." It's probably sitting on a shipping dock somewhere in Cleveland, and is the one you'll send your unsuspecting wife to pick up for you.

"Any tool, when dropped, will roll into the least accessible corner of the machine shed." The likelihood it will connect with big toe on the way down doubles with every ounce of tempered steel weight contained in the tool.

"Any discrepancy in your bank statement will not be in your favor." This applies no doubt to not only farmers, but the entire adult population of the world. Only once, years ago, did I catch a bank in error.

"Nothing ever gets built on schedule or within budget." Running even farther ahead of farmers in perfectly this law of Murph's is the Department of Defense and NASA.

"There's always one more bug." It will generally buzz your ear just as you're falling asleep some muggy August night.

We've specialized on a few of Murphy's laws around here.

For instance, the night the 100-watt bulb, which keeps the calf barn sink pipes from freezing, goes kaput, is the night the temperature will drop to minus two degrees by morning.

And, the number of people you meet when running an emergency errand to town will increase two-fold for every patch on the ratty old barn jeans you didn't change for the trip.

The tines section of a hay fork will only disconnect from the handle when it's being used to toss a huge bundle of loose hay into a sticky-manure bedding pack in a dark corner of the barn.

Your friends from town will drop by just as you emerge from the barn after retrieving the above mentioned tines-section of the fork.

Farmers only ask to borrow their wives newly-cleaned cars when they've collected a half-inch of mud (or whatever) on the soles of their boots and a thick layer of corn dust on their insulated coveralls.

When your deep-pedigreed, high-producing cow finally has a heifer calf, it will be a twin to a bull, and therefore lack a complete reproductive system.

While they were never Constitutionalized, legislated, or debated at a public environmental impact hearing, we nevertheless seem stuck with Murphy's philosophies.

At least he makes a great scapegoat.

Sweet Treats For Sweethearts

It's love, it's love that makes the world go 'round. And on this day more than any other, love is supreme as we remember cherished friends and family.

Perhaps because love is thought of as a sweet emotion, lovers frequently make gifts of sweet foods. Confectioners mark Valentine's Day as their busiest day of the year.

When thinking of your loves this year, give them a gift from the heart and your hands with one of the delectable treats below.

Sweetheart Lemon Cream Torte

2 9-inch pie crusts
2 tsp flour
Filling:
⅓ cup sugar
3 tbsp cornstarch
¼ tsp salt
1⅓ cups milk
¼ cup lemon juice
2 egg yolks
1 tbsp butter
1 cup whipping cream
2 tbsp Confectioners sugar
Topping:
Fruit (strawberries, maraschino cherries, raspberries)
2 tbsp semi-sweet chocolate chips
1 tbsp butter

Sprinkle 1 tablespoon flour over one crust. Turn crust, flour side down, on ungreased cookie sheet. Cut a piece of paper into a heart shape about 10½ inches high and 10 inches wide to use as a pattern. Place pattern on crust and cut crust into heart shape. Generously prick crust with fork. Bake at 450 degrees for 9 to 11 minutes or until golden brown. Cool. Repeat with remaining crust.

In small saucepan, combine sugar, cornstarch and salt. Gradually add milk. Cook over medium heat until mixture boils and thickens, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. In small bowl, combine lemon juice and egg yolks; blend well. Add about ⅓ of the hot milk mixture to the egg yolk mixture, stirring constantly to blend. Stir egg yolk mixture into remaining milk mixture in saucepan. Cook an additional two minutes, stirring constantly. DO NOT BOIL. Stir in 1 tablespoon margarine until melted. Cover; refrigerate until cool.

In small bowl, combine whipping cream and powdered sugar. Beat until firm peaks form. Fold lemon mixture into whipped cream.

To assemble, place one heart-shaped pie crust on serving plate; spread with half of lemon filling mixture. Top with second crust and remaining filling. Arrange fruit around top edge of torte, ¼ inch from edge. In small saucepan, melt chocolate chips and 1 tablespoon margarine. Drizzle over lemon filling on top of torte. Refrigerate until serving time. 8-10 servings.

Cheery Cherry Triangles

⅔ cup milk
4½ cups flour
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup margarine
2 packages yeast
4 eggs, beaten
⅔ cup warm water
1 can or 1 quart cherry pie filling

Scald milk and set aside. In large bowl, add dry ingredients. Dissolve yeast in water. Add cooled milk to flour mixture. Stir until well blended and forms a soft dough. Cover and refrigerate overnight.

The next day, roll out dough and cut into triangular pieces. Put 1 heaping teaspoon of filling in center of triangle and bring 3 corners of the triangle in over center of filling. Bake until light brown at 350 degrees.

Boil pineapple, sugar, and cornstarch until thick. Let stand until cool.

1 teaspoon celery seed
¼ teaspoon salt

Frozens Team With Microwaves

We Americans are continuously looking for ways to save, whether it be time, money or energy resources, and frozen foods are helping us achieve this goal. Whether it be vegetables, entrees, side dishes, desserts or snacks, frozens, prepared in the microwave, are heightening the savings.

Besides the obvious advantages of speedy defrosting and cooking, the combination of frozen foods and the microwave oven are helping more and more consumers realize the considerable energy savings, ease in clean-up, and the unbeatable quality of frozen foods.

Energy is consumed only during the cooking time, which is short, and only by the food being cooked. Unlike a conventional oven, no energy is wasted heating the baking dish or the oven interior. This means the kitchen will not heat up either.

Because little or no water is needed in microwave cookery, water-soluble vitamins are retained. Frozen fruits and vegetables keep their bright colors and fresh flavors when cooked in a microwave.

After dinner clean-up also becomes less of a chore with a microwave oven. Food spatters do not bake on, so both cooking utensils and the oven can be wiped clean easily. In addition, many frozen foods can be cooked right in their containers. Plastic food pouches need only to be slit or punctured to let the steam escape. Other frozen foods are packed in oven-ready containers which can also be used in conventional ovens.

Many frozen food packages include microwave cooking instructions usually written for high power ovens (600 to 700 watts). These directions should be followed carefully. The frozen food industry has also designed a special logo to make microwaveable frozen foods easily identifiable. Look for the logo, MICROWAVEABLE, in large bold letters the next time you shop for frozen food.

Don't Become Dehydrated

Many people enjoy outdoor activities in the winter: skiing, sled riding, snow mobiling, even taking walks after a freshly fallen snow. But many people do not realize that you can easily become dehydrated when you are out in the cold.

Sixty percent of your body weight is water. Water's main function is to carry nutrients from the food you digest into your body, but it also serves as a lubricant, helps control body temperature, and carries waste out of the body. Most people know that you lose body water through sweating and urinating, but you also lose it through your lungs, which is why you can become dehydrated on winter days. You lose eight to 10 cups of water every day, and you have to replace it.

You can get water from a variety of foods and liquids, but some are better sources than others. For example, water is absorbed more slowly from sugary drinks. Also, caffeine stimulates you to excrete more water.

So if you are planning on spending time outside this winter, be sure to replenish your body's water loss by drinking plenty of liquids. If you drink coffee or tea in the morning, concentrate on drinking water for the rest of the day. If you have never tried sparkling water, give it a try. The carbonation makes you feel like you are having something special rather than just a glass of water.

Some People Are Sick And Tired Of Winter

Bright Lights Help Alleviate Perplexing Winter Depression
By Mercer Cross
National Geographic News Service

BETHESDA, Md. — Dr. Norman E. Rosenthal, one of the world's leading authorities on seasonal depression, admits that he himself suffers from the winter blahs.

He copes with his problem the same way his more severely afflicted patients at the National Institute of Mental Health do. For several hours each winter day, he works beside a bank of especially bright fluorescent lights.

An unknown number of Americans -- at least several hundred thousand -- become depressed enough to cease functioning normally during the dark days of winter. Psychiatrist Rosenthal coined the term now commonly used to describe their trouble: seasonal affective disorder, SAD for short.

Starting in the fall and continuing through the winter, SAD sufferers sink into depression. They lose their ability to concentrate. They overeat, oversleep, and gain weight. They become irritable and squabble with their spouses and associates. Their sex drive diminishes.

Women are four times likelier than men to have the seasonal melancholia. Onset of the disorder may come in childhood, but is more likely to start in young adulthood. Although darkness seems to be the main cause, cold, snowy weather may contribute.

Alcoholism and suicide go hand in hand with SAD. "Lots of that suicide -- probably 90 percent -- is alcohol-related," says Dr. Aron S. Wolf, a psychiatrist in Anchorage, Alaska.

Come spring, as the days grow longer, the symptoms start to fade. By summer, the SAD victims are normal again.

The farther north people live, the more prevalent the syndrome becomes. Swedes call it "Lapp sickness," for the isolated Laplanders who dwell above the Arctic Circle. The Finnish word is "kaamos."

Whatever it's called, seasonal depression has been around as long as recorded history. In about 400 B.C., Socrates said that "melancholia occurs in the spring."

But not until the winter of 1981-82 did Rosenthal and his colleagues conduct research that led to development of the full-spectrum light panels, five to 10 times brighter than average indoor lights.

Among American specialists, the lights are the generally accepted treatment for SAD sufferers. After a few days of sitting in front of the lights for several hours, most victims of extreme blahs perk up significantly. When they cease treatment for more than a few days, their depression returns.

The specialists don't agree on the optimal daily time for using the lights. Rosenthal says two hours; other doctors say one; still others say six. A minority of patients don't respond to the lights and require other treatment, such as antidepressants.

Doctors have yet to learn exactly what brings on SAD. One physiological possibility is that it is related to hormones such as melatonin and prolactin and to serotonin, a chemical in the body. Bright lights, according to one theory, help to control these substances.

"The one thing I like to emphasize is that if somebody is genuinely depressed, he or she would do very well to have an expert treat the problem," Rosenthal says.

That advice doesn't stop some depressed people from circumventing their doctors. "We send lots of people to the lighting-supply store," Wolf says of those who reject professional help.

Although light therapy so far has been used predominantly by U.S. doctors, international cooperation may not be far away. Dr. Carla Hellekson, a psychiatrist in Fairbanks, Alaska, says that Americans and Russians have reached preliminary agreement on a joint study by Alaskan and Siberian specialists.

Among the many unanswered questions, Dr. Hellekson says, is why Alaskan Eskimos are less susceptible than whites to SAD. "Clearly they've adapted over many centuries." Wolf says, "If you believe in the land-bridge theory, the Eskimo people were Siberians to begin with."

Long Scandinavian winters create their share of depression. But Dr. Eric Jannerfeldt, medical attache at the Swedish Embassy in Washington, says that light treatment isn't used in his country.

"Swedes tend to take advantage of winter much more than you do here," he says. Part of the U.S. problem, he suggests, may be the prevalence of windowless offices. "That is quite unthinkable in Sweden," he says.

Some scientists have drawn a correlation between SAD symptoms and hibernating animals. Rosenthal rejects the correlation. "Zoologists scoff at the analogy because it's very superficial," he says. "The similarity is that both the hibernating animal and a patient with SAD are less active in the winter. And that's probably where it stops."

All the experts agree that much remains to be learned about the perplexing illness. Rosenthal and his associates at the national institute are doing research on reverse SAD, which depresses some people in summer but sends them soaring in winter.

Doctors at the University of Minnesota Hospitals in Minneapolis are investigating SAD's effects on children. At Brookside Hospital in Nashua, N.H., researchers concerned about possible retinal damage from the full-spectrum lights are studying the removal of ultraviolet light from the spectrum.

Rosenthal says he hopes that eventually light therapy will go beyond its present limited use and "serve as a probe into our understanding of brain function."

Rigors of nearly interminable winters pose a challenge for residents of northern latitudes, such as this man in Helsinki, Finland. The farther north people live, the more susceptible they are to seasonal affective disorder, or SAD, which afflicts millions worldwide. Finns call it "kaamos." Swedes call it "Lapp sickness."

SEWING GRAINBOARD WORKSHOP - Have you ever wished that your ironing board was wider and things didn't slip off? Have you ever wished for a cutting surface that didn't allow fabric to slip and slide? If you have wished for either of the above, consider mixing a sewing grainboard. In this four hour class you will construct a padded, gridded board which makes straightening, cutting, pressing and tailoring faster and easier. Part of the class will be a demonstration of its multiple uses. This versatile board is guaranteed to become one of your FAVORITE pieces of sewing and fabric craft equipment. A supply list will be sent prior to class. The cover costs about $15.00 plus the expense of ½ sheet of plywood or fiberboard and a wool blanket or fabric. Class Limit: 10. INSTRUCTOR: Mary Alice Fyock. Cost: $8.00.

Workshop #4 - 9:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m., February 24.

THE HEART OF CURVED PIECING - If you like the look of the log cabin quilt pattern, you'll be eager to piece this heart block. It is composed of bias cut pieces of fabric, joined to diagonally set blocks chaining through the center of the heart. The bias piecing makes this a challenging block.

During this 3-hour class, you will piece one block, then inset it into a square piece of fabric. Intermediate sewing skills are absolutely necessary. Ideas for using this block in creative ways will be presented.

Supplies needed for class: sewing machine; extension cord; sewing and cutting supplies; iron and mat; ¾ yard of a solid, 100% cotton fabric; 8-10 pieces of coordinated cotton calicoes (5"x10" each is sufficient); rubber cement; paper scissors. Class Limit: 15. INSTRUCTOR: Donna Lucidi-Nachwostach. Cost: $12.00 (includes $3.00 for pattern).

Workshop #19 - 6:30-9:30 p.m., February 10.

NEEDLE NEWS NEWSLETTER - This newsletter, written by Fran Horst, Lebanon County Extension Assistant, will feature news for home sewers, new techniques for sewing garments, and items for the home and gifts. It is six-sided and is published every other month.

If you would like to receive this newsletter during 1988, please complete one of the registration forms at the end of this letter and mail with your check for $2.00 to cover the cost of postage for one year's subscription. Deadline to sign up to receive this newsletter is February 19, 1988.

FAMILIES MANAGING IN THE 80's - LEARN AT HOME - Who's taking care of the money? You? Have you ever come to the end of the month and wondered where the money went? Do family financial decisions simply seem to happen? Do all members of your family know where legal and financial papers are? Most of us feel a little uncomfortable with these questions.

Managing finances is not just a job for bankers, we all need to do it for ourselves and our families. But how? Sometimes the hardest part of getting organized is deciding what to do first, and then to do it.

The Penn State Cooperative Extension Service may be able to help. If you are trying to save money to buy a home or to improve one, if you have children you hope to send to school, or if you are planning for retirement you'll be interested in our program. It's a series of five mini-lessons on basic financial skills you can use at home.

Each lesson covers a single financial topic all families need to know about. How to organize your financial and legal papers, how to set up a system for spending and saving, how to know how much you are really worth or the family's net worth and how to manage credit are some of the subjects covered.

To pre-register for the learn-at-home program, complete one of the registration forms and send your check for $3.00 to cover mailing costs. Registration deadline: February 19.

"TRICK" PIECED TRADITIONS (Machine piecing of traditional quilt blocks) - "Trick" pieced is a quickly pieced traditional block. Cherry Basket, Pine Tree, Rolling Pin and Flying Geese can be a nightmare of triangles when cut and pieced in a traditional manner. But what a joy when using this exciting method of quick piecing. Imagine . . . you don't cut a single triangle!! Amaze others with your piecing skill! You can also use the method to make an adaptation of Sunshine and Shadow, another difficult design.

Learn the method, then proceed to make three sample blocks of your selected traditional blocks. You'll be amazed at how quickly you can piece these traditional quilt blocks. If using coordinated fabrics, you'll have the basis for a 3-block wallhanging, for which instructions and pattern will be provided. Participants must bring their own sewing machine.

Participants should have some knowledge of quilting or have sewing experience. A list of supplies required will be sent to those persons who register. Class Limit: 12. INSTRUCTOR: Donna Lucidi-Nachwostach. Cost: $21.00 (includes $6.00 for pattern).

Workshop #18 - 6:30-9:00 p.m., February 24, March 9 and 16.

SEWING MACHINE MAINTENANCE - When was the last time you serviced your machine, as recommended in the owner's manual? Sewing machines are sensitive to accumulations of lint, dust and thread pieces which collect in the moving parts of the machine. Lack of proper oiling and lubricating can also interfere with optimum machine performance. If your machine starts sluggishly, is noisy, makes loose or skipped stitches, maybe it's time for a thorough cleaning. Why not bring in your machine and learn the basic maintenance procedures, including tension and pressure adjustment.

Participants are requested to bring the following items to class: sewing machine, sewing machine oil, tweezers, brush for cleaning machine parts, screwdrivers (the tiny ones which came with your machine, and one medium size), threaded bobbin, spool of thread and small piece of scrap fabric to test thread tension, and your user manual. Class Limit: 15. INSTRUCTOR: Donna Lucidi-Nachwostach. Cost: $5.00.

Workshop #7 - 6:30-8:30 p.m., February 29.

MICROWAVE BASICS - Did you just receive a microwave or do you have one you do not use to its full potential? Learn how to take advantage of all the marvelous features your microwave offers you. In this workshop you will discover how the microwave works, cooking techniques, microwave utensils and recipes. Class Limit: 35. INSTRUCTOR: Audrey Hallgren. Cost: $5.00.

Workshop #11 - 7:00-9:00 p.m., February 16.

Workshop #12 - 10:00-12:00 noon, February 23.

BEFORE YOU SIT TO SEW - The success or failure of a garment begins before you sew the first stitch. Begin by learning about characteristics and quality of fabric and follow ith suggestions for selecting the RIGHT fabric for your pattern. Learn how to handle problem fabrics and to take the mystery out of interfacing choices. Determining you correct size and flat measuring a pattern will also be covered. Hopedell Farm in Valley Township, Chester County, has been in the Hope family since 1743.

Keeping The Hopedell Tradition Alive

BY MARJORIE KEEN
Chester Co. Correspondent

COATESVILLE — Twenty-eight Hope family members were present at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show last month for Hopedell Farm's bicentennial recognition. Hopes have occupied the Valley Township farm ever since Yorkshireman Thomas Hope was granted 320 acres in 1743.

According to the land patent granted by William Penn's sons John, Richard and Thomas in the 17th year of the reign of King George II, Hopedell Farm was originally part of Sadsbury Township.

Today's keepers of the family tradition are William and Ruth Hope Handy, retired banker and school teacher, respectively. According to Ruth, she and her twin sister, Jean, grew up as the ninth generation of Hopes to occupy Hopedell Farm. Their children and grandchildren traveled with them to Harrisburg for the bicentennial award.

Their late father, one of several Hopes named Thomas, operated a dairy until 1963. For the past quarter century, another dairy farmer has planted the fields in corn and hay. Either dairy heifers or beef cattle graze in the meadows. "Nothing worse for a farm than being idle," said Bill Handy.

Ruth remembered when her father shipped milk by train from Pomeroy to Philadelphia. "They milked at four and they were up there by 6:30. That's where all the affairs of the nation were taken care of as the farmers waited for the train," she laughs.

After the Philadelphia dairy changed hands, the Hopes took the milk to Christiana in a Ford pickup truck. "Jean and I used to ride among sometimes because we always got a lollipop or an ice cream cone," Ruth reminisced.

Ruth and Bill Handy sit under the sign that brought travelers to Hopedell Farm during the Great Depression.

Ten quart cans of milk from the afternoon milking were stored overnight in Hopedell Farm's two-story springhouse. "It's been springing for over 200 years," Bill stated. Ruth helped carry water from springhouse to farm house before central plumbing was installed when she was five years old.

"Of course there was no bathroom, but that little storeroom had a great, big copper bathtub in it with a wooden frame around it," Ruth related. "They used to have a cistern here. They collected rain water and heated that for the bathtub and brought it upstairs. They did the same for the washing machine."

The wood-shingled outhouse still stands, one of the buildings protected by Hopedell's designation as a national historic site.

Ruth pointed out the eighteenth century walls of the original four-room stone house. Four William Penn corner fireplaces provided winter heat for the first generations. A large addition in 1830 increased the house to its present bedroom size.

The addition's date was determined by oral tradition and confirmed by still-vivid wax fruit under a large glass globe in Hopedell's dining room. Ruth explained, "The year they built this side of the house it was popular for the ladies to make wax fruit arrangements instead of quilt. They'd become a little more well-to-do and had all the quilts they needed, so they did things that were a little on the luxurious side."

Hopedell's dining room table stretches to seat two dozen for Christmas dinner. Although Ruth

Hopedell Tradition

and Bill Handy are presently the only two permanent residents, they're much too busy to feel lonely in the big farm house. "We have a lot of company and we have grandchildren here almost every weekend," said Ruth. "We really enjoy it."

Each summer more than 100 Hopes gather at Hopedell for a family reunion. For the farm's 200th anniversary Ruth's parents planned a special open house. Twenty-five years later the Handys held a three-day party with 500 drop-in guests.

Ruth's easy hospitality was developed during her growing-up years when her mother ran a tourist home. She indicated the sign that beckoned travelers to Hopedell Farm during the two Depression years that U.S. Route 30 was under construction. "The first sign, that Mother made herself, is really primitive; it's in the attic. A man in Parkesburg painted this one. He didn't get it done, and he didn't get it done. So finally my dad would take every rainy day that he couldn't work on the farm and go up there and sit with (the painter) to see that he didn't get drunk."

Before Lena Hope advertised the tourist home, city-based vacationers would come to the farm for as long as six weeks each summer, Ruth remembers. She recalled a Rhode Island hardware salesman who liked staying on the farm so much that he went back to Providence and brought his wife and two children down.

"They stayed here two weeks while he went to Wilmington, Reading, Lancaster and Harrisburg, and then back here in the evening," she said. "We played around the barn and played with the animals and swam and went hiking. They came back every single year until the girl started to college."

Hopedell Farm has been in the middle of American transportation development for most of its 245 years. Valley Road bisects the farm south of Sucker Run. Next to the road the Conestoga Traction Company's trolley tracks used to run along the meadow.

"We rode on the trolley very seldom," Ruth stated, "It cost five cents to go to Parkesburg. When you were making two dollars a day, five cents was something you just didn't throw around. But we got more pleasure watching other people ride it, especially in summertime when Lukens Steel Company had their picnic at Rocky Springs Park. Hundreds and hundreds would ride in open air trolleys with banners across the sides."

In the 1800's, after Robert Hope divided the original farm with his brother, the Philadelphia and Columbia Railroad cut through the property. Robert was given permission to cross the tracks to harvest his wheat and corn. Later the railroad denied access to the north fields.

Robert overcame what could have been an economic hardship by burning qua'ity limestone from the shallow hillside north of Sucker Run, spreading it on his fields and sharing the excess with neighbors. By 1850 crop production was evenly divided between what, Indian corn and oats at 150 bushels each.

Robert's son, Thomas, started dairying when it came his turn to manage the farm about 1860. Twenty years later he'd increased the herd 500 percent, generating an income of $13,500. Even so, the family had to cope with the railroad's new owner, the Pennsylvania Railroad. In 1879, Thomas sold land north of the line to the Pennsy and used the money to add a veranda and Italianate windows to the house.

The railroad planted locust trees as replacements for their old stone ties, but never harvested a single one, according to Ruth. The railroad also began using a spring in the woods to fill the wooden water tower built next to the tracks. The tower was dismantled after the line was electrified.

Bill has seen changes at Hopedell since he married Ruth in 1944. Horses were used on the farm until 1950. "I remember Frank and Barney," Bill recalled. "Back in the day of steam locomotives old Duke filled the haymow--the horse was blind but strong; the hayfork was manual but efficient."

Ruth added that her father oiled harnesses next to a pot-bellied stove on the second floor of the springhouse. "He also had a tractor," she declared.

The next change to Hopedell Farm may come from the 35-foot Sucker Run dam proposed by the Chester County Water Resources Authority. "It would take over our whole farm," Ruth stated. "In case of a hundred-year flood, water would be up in our bedroom. For that reason we couldn't live here."

"We can't sit around waiting for that," Bill says. "We had the hall, front room and three bedrooms papered. We're going to keep going on faith."

An artistic arrangement of colorful wax fruit was made by the ladies of the Hope family and their friends about 1830.

The Hostetters Of Hayesville Continuing The Heritage Of Their Home

BY PAT PURCELL

OXFORD (CHESTER CO.) — The historically rich three-story brick home of the Hostetters towers above the more modern homes in the village of Hayesville, Chester County.

The magnitude of this home finds its only competition sky in the adjacent feed and grain towers of Hostetter's Grain Company. The Hostetters are doing more than processing neighbors grain into livestock feed. They are mking history.

The home of William and Melissa Hostetter and their two children, Rebekah, 9, and Phillip, 5, is located on the Hostetter family farm owned by William's parents, Wilmer and Joyce Hostetter. This home dates back to the early days of the 1700's.

If Walls Could Talk

Ten years ago, William and Melissa Hostetter moved into a house which already had a long and active history if need of repair was any indication. William, who now manages the grain operation, moved into the house when he Melissa were married, but it was hardly a sight which would delight many young couples.

"It was in need of a great deal of repair when they moved in. "All the walls had one or two layers of wallpaper on them. The floor in the what is now the family room was rotted and all the windows were in very bad shpe. When the wind blew, the curtains moved," explained Melissa.

But she is not complaining. Restoring an 18th century home may not appeal to everyone, but Melissa appreciates is aged look.

"If I had a new house, I would find a way to make it look old," said Melissa.

However, restoring an old home is not without its problems.

Located on the "road leading from West Chester to the Oxford Borough, two-and-a-half miles from the later place, known as the Hayesville Hotel property," according to newspaper clippings from the Chester County Historical Society, this home is on part of the Hayes original tract.

Described in an 1880 newspaper real estate sale ad in 1880: "The improvementns consist of a large substantial brick dwelling conveniently divided into comfortable rooms, with a most excellent wash house attached, containing pump, water furnaces and all the necessary conveniences. The house also contains a large store room and fixtures . . There are also three good tentant houses.

The room described as the wash house with all the necessary conveniences may be the room which serves its present family as the kitchen. Described as being "attached" Melissa believes the wash room now kitchen was defintely an afterthought.

"The big block of granite between the kitchen and dining room makes me believe the room was built on after the rest of the house was built. A block of stone like that was usually found at the entrance of a house. It just doesn't make sense to put it between two rooms within the house," said Melissa.

Also directly beneath the kitchen and mudroom are two hand dug wells lending more evidence that the kitchen was the washroom.

According to Melissa there was up until a few years a go a small house on the property that could have been the tenant house they mentioned. It has since been torn down. There were two tracts of land and some different accounts on the Hayesville Hotel and post office which were operated on both tracts of land.

Hayesville Post Office and Hotel

From the 1946 newspaper article "It was Henry Hayes who took over 500 acres about the year 1705, where he had 15 children and many grandchildren ."

The first post office was established in 1850 with James Hayes as the first postmaster.

"It is supposed that the post office was in the general store or hotel belonging to James Hayes, and that he died while he was postmaster."

After several subsequent postmasters the post office was closed in 1879, but reopened in 1881 under a new name of Townsend. The new postmaster was Harry S. Powley and he acted until Jacob H. Wolf was named postmaster in 1884. Wolf served for more than 12 years.

However, Wolf reportedly was a farmer and a hotel proprietor. He moved the post office to his hotel and about 1935 he tore down the the post office building. By 1946 he had died, but it was reported that his family still owned the hotel property, which is the Hostetter home.

"We have had several people drop in whose ancestors have lived here. One man whose mother lived here was a descendant of Jacob Wolf. He brought with him a picture of the house when it housed the post office and general store. The men were all sitting around outside ón boxes and horses were tied up outside. I would love to have that picture, but he would not part with it. I don't blame him. He remembered the general store of the early 1900's," explained Melissa.

The front room of the Hostetter home extends for the entire length of the house. According to Melissa it was this room in which the post office and general store were operated.

It must have seen a great deal of traffic. It's wooden floor is made of narrow planks, which were used in houses built much later than the 18th century. All the other rooms have the wide plank board floors. This suggests perhaps that this floor was replaced in the 1900's.

The three-story brick home towers proudly over the smaller modern homes in the Hayesville neighborhood and is only outdone in height by the Hostetter Grain Company on the adjoining property.

Room by room and peice by peice Melissa and William have turned this 18th century house into their home. Family antiques fill the home with memories as well as beauty. Every corner and niche has a story to tell and the observer always finds something different.

Although not the size of a concert hall, the spacious living room in which the Hayesville Post Office and general store were operated at one time is now filled with the old and new. Melissa Hostetter (left) assists her daughter Rebekah on the piano. This is the only room in the house with a narrow plank floor suggesting the floor was probably replaced long after the house was built in the 1700's.

A history of Restoration

The bricks were reportedly brought over from Great Britain on ballasts by Henry Hayes, but in 1850 Jacob Wolf purchased the home and covered the bricks in stucco. Consequently, the Hostetter's first task was to clean the stucco from the brick.

The Hostetter's contracted Oxford builder Joseph Chamberlain, who is well-known for his restoration work. However, after beginning the process of cleaning the brick with blasting machines, Chamberlain noticed that many of the bricks were disintegrating under the pressure.

"For the next two years Bill and his brothers spent weekends and any free time they had chiping away at the bricks with hammer and chisel for the next two years," said Melissa. "We had no choice. Mr. Chamberlain came back and finished with some sandblasting. He replaced and repointed the bricks," she said. "To keep out the fine dust we had to hang wet sheets over the windows and doors. It's beautiful now, but I don't think we would ever go through that again."

However by exposing the beauty of the brick, the brick was also being exposed to the weather and that resulted in some unpleasant surprises.

"After a driving rain one Christmas Eve, we returned home to find water streaming down the inside walls of our living room on one side. The bricks were poruous. Since then we have had the house sprayed with silicone to seal the bricks, but we still have moisture in some of the areas," said Melissa.

Colonial homes also lacks many of the amenities which modern houses boast.sThis colonial home lacks many of the amenities of which modern houses boast. Built in closets were a thing of the future in the 1700's. The only closet in this home was not built to hang clothing.

"One person who stopped in and wanted to see the house, but I am cautious with people stopping in. He said he had lived here before and remembers his mother praying in the prayer closet off the master bedroom. come in. We talked for a while before he came in and said he remembered his mother praying in the prayer closet off the master bedroom. And there was a closet there and no other rooms had one and I always wondered what it was for."

And electrical outlets, there never seems to be enough of them. In this house there is only one in each room, and although it is hard to believe, the Hostetter's have not changed that, they have only added a few.

The Hostetter, Price and Slauch History

Melissa has brought some personal family history into their home in the form of furniture. Throughout each room are pieces handed down from her mother or father's family. And the children Rebekah and Phillip know each piece as Grammy Price's bed or Grammy Slauch's table. Melissa feels the children have learend something from being surrounded by these heirlooms and have acquired an appreciation for history and family.

"They know that this is Grammy Price's," said Melissa as she runs her hands over a metal white bed, no doubt remembering the nights she spent in that bed at her grandmother's home. "I slept in that bed when I was little and now they sleep in it. I grew up with all of these things and they will, too. I guess it gives them a sense of security."

Few pieces have been purchased, but those which have, already have special memories. William surprised Melissa one Christmas with a child's sled. It was not new. It was the wooden model, the one most likely seen in a Currier and Ives print. And it was not an easy gift to find.

Then there is the oak rolltop desk which Melissa describes as Williams prize. And other peices which are not family heirlooms have been made special because Melissa's father has restored them in his spare time.

The Hostetters have made their house a home, peice by piece and room by room. Over the years they have sanded floors, removed wallpaper, painted and stencilled and have gradullly furnished their home with the decor that best fits their lives.

In October of 1987 the Hostetter's home was on the tour of homes for Chester County Day. Melissa is amazed that anyone would want to see their home.

"We just live here. It just so happened that we live in a very old home, but if I had a new home I still would have made it look old somehow and I would have wanted all of my family's antiques around me. I am very content here. I think we'll be staying her a long time," said Melissa.

This old home with high celings and cold brick walls and bare wood floors may sound cold, but upon entering there is an immediate rush of warmth, comfort and security. Its beauty as well as its warmth is not just the result of decorating, it goes deeper than that. This warmth and beauty comes from treasuring family memories and not from treasuring family antiques.

In one hundred years from now the Hostetter history will become a part of the legacy begun by Henry Hayes. What they have done on their 18th century home will be recorded in the annals of the Chester County Historical Society. And if the home is still standing, its future occupants will be digging through the society's collection of newspaper clippings to learn something about the Hostetters. If they are curious enough to uncover the long history of their home as Melissa has done.

And as those who have toured the Hostetter home admire the beautiful stenciling Melissa has done and the refinished wood floors and the renewed brick which William has devoted so many hours to, no doubt, that in 100 years, new occupants will labor to make their own changes. And just as the Hostetters shook their head in disbelief at the large bluebirds which adorned the walls of Phillips bedroom when they first saw the house, the future occupants will marvel at the pineapples stenciled border along the top of he living room walls.

Lower Cholesterol With Moderation Not Martyrdom

BY JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

COLUMBIA, Md. — How diet affects the blood cholesterol is not as "cut and dried" as it has been reported to be in past years, according to some diet researchers.

"We have to get over the idea that everything we eat is going to kill us," observes David Kritchevsky, Ph.D, Assistant Director of the Wistar Institute of Anatomy and Biology. And, while exercise is beneficial, weight loss appears to have a greater effect on lowering cholesterol.

Dr. Kritchevsky was the featured speaker for the annual meeting of the Chesapeake Bay Division, Dairy Food and Nutrition Council of the Southeast, held Monday at the Columbia Inn. The Baltimore-area Dairy Food and Nutrition Council is part of SUDI-A, and funded by Middle Atlantic Division members of Dairymen, Inc.

According to Dr. Kritchevsky, high blood cholesterol is one of several risk factors, including smoking and high blood pressure, linked to increased risk of heart attacks.

However, individual's blood cholesterol levels may vary, according to time of day, season of the year, stress, even the body's position at time of testing. One cholesterol test, he noted, may be an indicator, but may not necessarily present an accurate overall level. A series of ten, he believes, is necessary for accuracy.

Citing various studies, Dr. Kritchevsky related research data showing that, if cholesterol intake from food sources is reduced, the body may increase its production of the substance necessary for certain functions. Likewise, extra cholesterol intake generally triggers the liver to stop its own cholesterol output.

"The good guys are getting bad and the bad guys getting good," Dr. Kritchevsky noted, reflecting on moderating trends in diet recommendation.

Eggs, which once took a beating in cholesterol danger reports, are finding renewed medical favor due to their high grade protein. Red meats are also regaining their image as important to the diet, containing numerous nutritive trace elements needed for a balanced diet.

On the other hand, says Kritchevsky, bran is not the best fiber for the body, and soluble fibers from fruits and vegetables are more likely to help cholesterol levels, although they must be consumed in fairly large quantities. Popcorn, also a popular high-fiber food, may be laced with saturated fat flavorings. Non-dairy coffee creamers are similarly high in saturated fat.

"The Social Security System is in trouble because we're not," commented the nutrition researcher, citing the average American diet as a generally healthy one. Countries with higher fat diets have populations which live the longest, he added. Since 1900, the per thousand rate of mortality from heart and cardiovascular diseases has decreased.

"Moderation, not martrydom," urges Dr. Kritchevsky, when looking at the total diet picture.

Adams County Assigns Home Economist

GETTYSBURG — Nina L. Redding has been appointed to The Pennsylvania State University's Cooperative Extension staff as Extension Home Economist assigned to Adams County. She replaces Eleanor L. Garris who was transferred to the Franklin County Extension Office effective January 18, 1988.

James J. McKeehen, Regional Director for Cooperative Extension, said Redding would begin her educational duties on February 12, 1988.

A native of Gettysburg, she prepared for college at Gettysburg High School and earned her bachelor of science degree from Indiana University of Pennsylvania in May, 1982, majoring in Home Economics education. She has taken some credits toward the Master's degree at Hood College.

While in college Redding was active in the Home Economics Association, the Collegiate 4-H program and was elected to Kappa Omicron Phi, the Honorary Home Economics Society.

Redding is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Hoffman, 600 Cavalry Field Rd., Gettysburg. She is married to Russell C. Redding and resides at 584 Clear View Road, Aspers, PA.

Following graduation from Indiana University of Pennsylvania, Redding taught part-time in schools near Ithaca, New York and at Biglerville. In 1985-86, she taught Home Economics in the Junior High at Gettysburg and since August 1986, has been teaching Home Economics in the South Western School District, at Hanover, Pennsylvania.

Nina Redding

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

It is wonderful to be able to keep busy doing things that you enjoy. I think that is why some people farm. Most of them certainly don't do it to get rich. But if you like being your own boss, to a certain degree, and love the outdoors, it can be a good life.

Now that our children have all left home, I certainly do not have the load of household chores that I had ten or twenty years ago. And, so I look for new challenges. Each winter I take advantage of various classes that our township offers.

The Parks and Recreation Department in my area offers many different courses. They range from swimming and gymnastics for toddlers to crocheting and scuba diving for adults.

The variety of classes always amazes me. Over the years, I've taken "Furniture Refinishing," Psychology of Life," "Stocks and Bonds," and "Seasonal Color Analysis." There are many others available such as computer training, interior design, watercolor, aerobic dance and racquetball.

I've also taken sewing machine quilting at the Extension office and a class on rug braiding at a local museum. It gives me a good feeling to be able to re-finish a chair or bureau and also to know how to braid a beautiful ring.

Keeping a house and a garden is enjoyable but since we have no near neighbors, it is refreshing to be able to get out of the house in the evening and meet other residents of our township.

There are lots of opportunities to learn new things and keep busy if we only avail ourselves of them. Somehow we become "senior citizens" before we are ready to assume the designation.

How Safe Are Waxes On Fruits And Vegetables?

More than 20 kinds of fruits and vegetables, including cantaloupes, eggplants, oranges, peaches, persimmons, squash, sweet potatoes, sweet peppers, cucumbers and tomatoes, are often waxed before they reach supermarket shelves. This is done to reduce moisture loss and prevent premature shriveling. The waxes replace natural wax lost when the produce is washed. Waxing also improves consumer acceptance. Oranges, for example, have a natural dull matte finish, but shoppers tend to choose those that are shiny.

Some consumers are concerned about the safety of eating waxed fruit.

"All waxes used on foods have been approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA)," says University of Delaware interim Extension home economist Bea Phillips.

According to Phillips, these waxes are derived from either vegetable, petroleum or insect sources. For example, carnauba, a common vegetable-based wax, is made from a type of palm leaf. Petroleum-based waxes contain the same ingredients as chewing gum bases. And the "shellac" used on some items is derived from the secretions of the lac bug.

The FDA requires that all waxed produce at the supermarket be accompanied with a card above the bin or with a label on the bin or container itself listing the specific ingredients in the wax used on that particular commodity. Even so, one rarely sees such information displayed. One reason for this lack of labeling, Phillips says, is difficulty in enforcement. Also packers often change the type of wax used due to changes in a variety of conditions such as temperature and humidity.

THEY HOLD DOWN MORE THAN ONE JOB.

Kubota's mid-sized tractors are very versatile. You'll find them at work on farms, in parks, nurseries, estate homes and even on construction sites.

The reason is simple. Our L-Series tractors come with features you'd expect to find only on bigger, heavier machines. For example, 3-, 4-, or 5-cylinder diesel engines with PTO horsepower from 21 to 40.

Other features you can select include 8x7 or 8x8 mechanical or hydraulic shuttle-shift. A choice of 2- or 4-wheel drive on most models. A hefty 3-point hitch. And more.

So if you're looking for a tractor that can get the job done, whatever it is, you've found it. The Kubota L-Series.

T-Shirt Design Contest Planned For Jersey Club Meeting

UNIVERSITY PARK — The Pennsylvania Junior Jersey Cattle Club is sponsoring a T-shirt design contest. Entries can be submitted by all Jersey youth ages eight to 21, and should follow the theme of "Juniors in Dairy Promotion." Designs need to be eight by 10 inches, and of one color. Mail your entries by March 5th to: Lori Sollenberger, R.D. 3 Box 427, Everett, PA 15537; or bring them with you to the state meeting where entries will be displayed and voted on by everyone attending.

The winner will receive a free T-shirt. These shirts will be sold to raise money for junior activities such as the trip to Louisville, Kentucky for the National Jersey Show.

Also planned for the meeting is a silent auction. Donated items including crafts and baked goods will be dislayed, and 'silent' bids will be taken. At the end of the meeting, items will be sold to the highest bidder. Anyone can bring a donated item. All proceeds go to the junior fund.

There will also be junior activities following the Friday night dinner.

Maryland and Virginia Dairy Herd Meetings Scheduled

Dairy farmers in Maryland and northern Virginia face many of the same herd management problems. So representatives of the Cooperative Extension Service at land-grant universities in both sides have arranged a traveling seminar which will make stops at three locations on consecutive days during the second week of March.

Interested persons from throughout the Mid-Atlantic area are welcome to attend any of the meetings in either state. This would include residents of West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Delaware - as well as Maryland and Virginia.

Most of the speakers are state Extension specialists from Virginia Tech and the University of Maryland. Several of them will appear on the program at all three locations.

The two Maryland meetings are first on the schedule. They will emphasize dairy heifer management. The Virginia meeting, coming last, will concentrate on reproduction and herd health. Here is the schedule:

March 8 - Friendly Farms Restaurant, located east of White House in northern Baltimore County.

March 9 - Ramada Inn at Hagerstown (Washington County).

March 10 - Ruritan grounds, located two miles west of Berryville (Clarke County), along business Route #7.

Both Maryland meetings will include commercial exhibits. They will start with registration at 9:00 a.m. The formal program will run from 10:00 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., with an hour off for lunch. Visits with commercial exhibitors may be made from 9:00 - 10:00 a.m. and from 2:30 - 3:30 p.m.

Tickets for the noon lunch should be purchased from the Carroll County Extension Office, 700 Agriculture Center, Westminster, MD 21157. The $5.00 charge also will include a copy of the proceedings.

The Virginia meeting will not have commercial exhibits, and there will be no registration. The program will run from 10:00 a.m. - 2:30 p.m. A catered lunch will be available at noon for a nominal charge.

Unique to this meeting will be a presentation by George Washington, owner of the Loudoun Veterinary Service at Purcellville Virginia. Dr. Washington is a distant cousin of his famous namesake. He will speak on "Herd Health Practices."

For further information contact Stan Fultz, 301-848-4611.

The Maryland Cooperative Extension Service's programs are open to all citizens without regard to race, color, sex, handicap, religion, age or national origin.

SLICK CONCRETE CAN BE ROUGHENED

SCABBLING is an effective way to avoid unnecessary losses of cattle. The SCABBLER makes bands about two inches wide approximately 1/8" to 3/16 in. depth. This gives sufficient area for good footing while allowing you to scrape the smooth surface as before. It is near enough to the surface to give your cows full advantage of the roughness and deep enough to remain effective for years. It greatly aids in heat detection.

And the good news is that it is reasonably priced. You have the choice of doing it yourself or having us do it for you. We offer service right to your door. Call us for more details.

Mifflin County Dairy Farm

Operating dairy farm for sale in Lewistown, R.D. 1, area. Owners health is main reason for decision to sell property. The farm is located on a paved road in Ferguson Valley, 4 miles from Lewistown, 30 miles from Penn State. There are 142 acres on the farm with 100-plus of them tillable and 28 pasture. The balance are in woodlands and building sites. There is a stream running on each side of the farm. The main barn and house are on the paved road with easy access to the milk house.

Buildings include a two story dairy barn with 34 stalls and two box stalls downstairs. The box stalls, and adjoining feed room could be easily expanded to include eight to ten more cow stalls. The second story has laminated rafters so the hay mow is a clear span. There is a complete hay conveying system in place. There is also a two story 36'x72' bank barn with heifer and dry cow pens. The dairy barn has a pipeline milker, gutter cleaner, a 12' by 36' milk house, and a 600 gallon bulk tank. Two stave silos are 12' by 45' and a 18' by 50'. There are several outbuildings that serve as machinery storage.

An excellent spring and two wells provide water for the farm and residence.

The farm house is a two story, 10 room, newly remodeled with 4 bedrooms, 2 bathrooms, aluminum siding, storm windows, and insulation. The heating system is oil fired hot water. Wall to wall carpet throughout. Two bow windows, sliding glass door and stone fireplace with stove insert.

A trailer pad with septic and well is also part of farm.

The present owner rents land that would be available to a new owner.

Shown by appointment only.

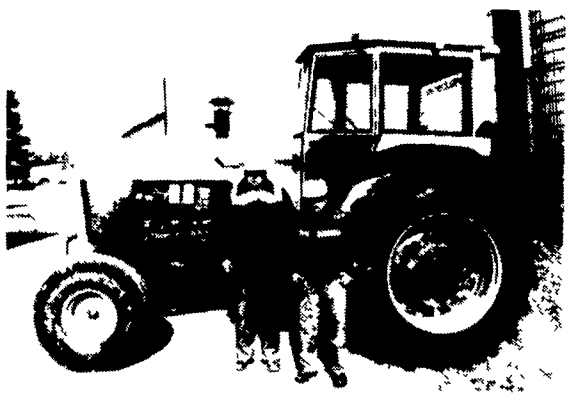
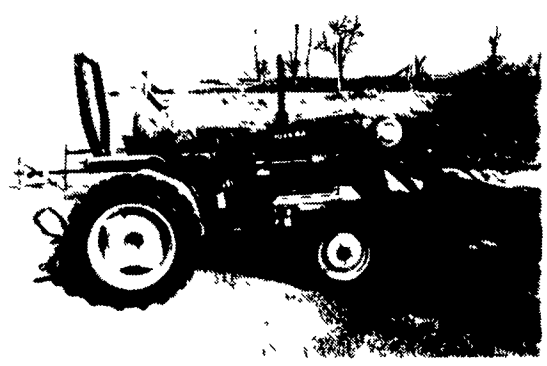
- Handling a complete line of dependable White Farm Equipment
- Stocking parts for Oliver & White Farm Equipment
- Offering the same courteous, reliable service that has been our trade mark for the past 4 years we have been in business.

The kind of service our customers are proud to tell you about; and the reason they have purchased new White Farm Equipment from G&D Repair:



Dale & Cletus Balmer, Manheim, Pa., beside their New White 2-135 tractor purchased in June 87. Both brothers are pleased with their new purchase and happy to have a local White dealer who offers fair prices and backs his sales with excellent service.

Leroy Oberholtzer, Manheim, Pa. purchased his White Model 120 in December 87. The Model 120 was one of 5 new tractor models introduced by White. "Repair service on other equipment, and good prices led me to look to G&D Repair when purchasing a new tractor."



"A Sweet Little Tractor" that's what Paul Keller, Lititz, Pa. calls his White compact model 31 4WD w/loader. With 4WD and syncro-mesh transmission working in tight places, cleaning springs, cutting grass as tall as the tractor, plowing snow, working in wet spots is no problem.

Rohrer Bros, Lititz, Pa. Jeff, Dale & Doug are anxiuously awaiting delivery of their new White 5100 no-till planter from G&D Repair. A good product, excellent price and a fine service reputation led to our purchase from G&D Repair.

KRAUSE TILLAGE INNOVATORS INVENTED THE ROCKFLEX DISC TO BRING PLEASURE TO FARMERS

ALL KRAUSE DISCS SOLD BY HOOBERS HAVE THE 8 FEATURES SHOWN AT RIGHT

SO THE FARMER ENJOYS THE 6 PLEASURES SHOWN BELOW

1...Rugged, dependable performance.

2...Excellent penetration in tough conditions.

3...Level job every time.

4...Higher resale value when it's time to trade or sell.

5...More timely planting.

6...More time with the wife.

1. "SUPERSEAL" BEARINGS
Engineered to assure positive greasing directly into the cartridge. The triple lip seals keep grease in, dirt and moisture out.

2. FRAMES
Engineered of super strength steel tubing with cross braces and gussets at major stress points.

3. WHEEL HUBS
Krause Made - Precision machined and regreasable. Every hub passes rigid inspection to assure proper tolerances.

4. TIE RODS AND SPOOLS
Alloy steel tie rods are 1¾" in diameter on heavy duty units (1½" on medium duty) - (30% to 70% stronger than many other brands.) There's a nut on both ends for easy servicing.
Krause spools are ductile iron, and weigh 20-to 30-lbs. each.

5. OVERLAPPING FRONT DISC GANGS
A unique Krause design for smoother, more uniform field finish. It eliminates the center strip of untilled ground left by conventional tandem discs.

6. "ROCKFLEX" BEARING ARMS
Krause invented the "Rock-Flex" arm in 1965. This unique C-shaped arm flexes over obstacles. It helps protect disc blades and spools from breakage. "SuperSeal" bearing is completely encased in rubber to absorb shock.

7. WING HINGES
Krause uses big 1¾" diameter bolts on heavy duty units (1½" on medium duty) with over 10" of wear surface area.

8. ROCKER SHAFTS
A full 6" in diameter with big steel tube wheel arms for maximum carrying capacity. Compare ours to other makes!

THE ANSWER TO LOW-LABOR MULTIPLE FEEDING WAS RIGHT UNDER OUR NOSES ALL THE TIME... AND IT ISN'T COMPUTERIZED!

It took a dairyman to invent such a perfect feeder.

GRAIN BRAIN MULTIFEEDER BY STARLINE®

We call this exciting new Starline® feeder, "Grain Brain"™ because it "thinks for itself" Here's how it works When you do your regular feeding, you also fill your "Grain Brain"™ multifeeders. Grain Brain™ does the rest At the time you have preset into Grain Brain™ the multifeeders drop feed for each cow's next feeding. That means you go from two or three-time to four or six time per day feeding with no extra labor!

A Grain Brain™ that will handle a 50-cow herd will cost you approximately $3,000, complete. Grain Brain™ is simple, easy to operate, reliable and capable of paying for itself in less than a year We're anxious to tell you the whole story, so see your Starline dealer soon By the way, "Grain Brain"™ was invented by a Minnesota dairyman for his own barn Now a lot of his neighbors have one, too

Retirees, 4-H'ers Honored At Lancaster County Banquet

BY LISA RISSER

MT. JOY — Children are important to John Zimmerman of Ephrata. That's why he became a 4-H beef leader, and that's why he is retiring as a leader after 18 years. John looks forward to spending more time with his six grandchildren.

Children are important also to Gerald Hess, Mountville. He too is retiring as a beef leader after 16 years of helping 4-H'ers.

John and Gerald were wished a fond good-bye at the Lancaster County 4-H Livestock Banquet last week. Members of the Red Rose Baby Beef Club presented the men with placques of appreciation.

John, a beef cattle producer, is a man who doesn't like to be idle. When his eldest daughter joined the Lancaster County Baby Beef club, there was only one leader, Mel Rohrer. John just naturally started helping Rohrer set up the fairs. One thing led to another and soon John was asked to be a leader.

While showing baby beef has changed a bit since he started, John's enjoyment hasn't. "I enjoy working with 4-H because I don't think there's a better group of kids and parents to work with," he said. "They're about the nicest bunch of people."

John derives real pleasure out of seeing young children come into the club shy and bashful and leave as confident young adults. He also likes to help them and see how well they do in the various levels of competition. Part of what he teaches them is how to win and lose. "It's a fact of life that everybody likes to win, but we have to have a loser," John mused.

While he has enjoyed being a leader, John realizes that a time comes when one must choose. And he has chosen family this time. "I think I did my part in 4-H. When I was needed, I was there," he said. "But now I want to spend time with my grandchildren."

Time is a priority also for Gerald Hess, who plans to spend more time with his family. Gerald started out in 4-H when his sons raised baby beef. Soon he was asked to be a leader "because I was interested in beef cattle and I liked helping out."

Gerald, a 30-year truck driver for Pennfield, first learned about beef cattle as a youngster when he worked on a farm. Insufficient funds to purchase a farm of his own led him to his present occupation.

Gerald fondly remembers the years when the baby beef club would run the show circuit from Harrisburg to Maryland and back again. Although the club members don't travel to the same fairs, Gerald derives the same enjoyment out of being a leader. "Working with the children and seeing them grow up is what I like," he said. "When they start in the club, they don't know cattle and slowly, you teach them and they learn."

The 4-h'ers weren't the only onees to learn: Gerald did too. "I learned patience and how to teach and encourage the kids not to quit when they didn't do as well at a show as they wanted. I also learned how to work together with the kids and other leaders."

If Gerald were to change any of his experiences as a beef leader, he would try to give the 4-H'ers more of his time. "There were times when I fell short on time. I would have liked to work more with the kids," he said.

Other than this, Gerald is pleased with his years in 4-H. "4-H is family," he said. "I enjoyed being with them."

A beef leader for 16 years, Gerald Hess is now retiring. The Red Rose Baby Beef Club expressed its appreciation for the work he has done with a plaque.

Winning 4-H'ers

Carey Donches of Manheim has gone from wallflower to president of the Woolies Club in six years. Once so shy that she was afraid to say her name at club meetings, Carey, 16, had the confidence and poise to stand before 350 people and execute her public-speaking duties as president.

In recognition of her hard-won self-confidence and her ability to raise quality sheep, Carey was named 1987 Shepherd of the Year for Lancaster County. In addition to possessing a traveling trophy for the year, Carey received $150 in savings bonds. She also was awarded the club's President's award.

Emily Weaver, Ephrata, has a success story of her own. A member of the Red Rose Baby Beef Club, she learned to judge livestock so well that she was the high individual in the state 4-H competition last year and high individual two years running at the Southeast District contest.

She also led the county livestock-judging team to the state team championship and to competition on the national level. Ellen Lewis, Joe Garber, and Tricia Musser were Emily's team mates. Together they placed 15th at the national competition.

Emily has shown champion steers throughout her years as a 4-H'er. Currently she is a sophomore at Penn State studying animal production.

Emily's achievements and leadership in her club were honored with the presentation of the Jason L. Weaver Memorial Leadership Award.

Another award winner in the beef club was Jennifer Schellenberger, who was presented with the Red Rose 4-H Award. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Schellenberger of Bird-In-Hand, Jennifer received the award from retired extension director M. Max Smith. The award is given to a club member who exhibits sportsmanship and perserverance.

Julie Greider and Dwain Livengood shared the award for best beef record books while Marcia Harnish won the award for having the highest daily beef gain. Her steer gained 2.94 pounds per day.

A new award for the Woolies Club, the Novice Shepherd of the Year, went to Laurie Boll, daughter of Jay and Lois Boll of Elizabethtown. The anual award is given to the member who shows the most promise. Laurie, 10, raised three Hampshires last year: Skeeter, Scooter, and Flopsy.

Tracy Bollinger was awarded for having the best Woolies Club record book.

The beef and sheep clubs made a joint presentation to Rick Sauder, reporter for the Intelligencer Journal. Their Appreciation Award was given for Sauder's coverage of 4-H events. Sauder was the newspaper's farm reporter for eight years and has recently moved on to general-assignment duties.

Cattle Producers Gain Better Understanding Of Industry At Workshop

LANCASTER —Grade and yield meat classifications, total mixed rations (TMRs), and genetics were only a few of the topics that cattle producers gained a little better understanding of at last week's annual Lancaster County Cattle Feeder's Day. Held at the Farm & Home Center, the workshop included commercial exhibits in addition to the lectures.

"The goal of genetic improvement is to produce feeder cattle that have efficient feed conversion and result in a carcass with meat acceptable to the consumer," said Dr. John Comerford, Penn State extension beef specialist. There are two methods for improving beef cattle. One is through selection of individual animals, the other involves a mating system.

Among some of the findings of a study Comerford conducted include:

•The offspring of a Polled Hereford dam or sire was fast growing after weaning; Brahmin offspring grow well during preweaning and more slowly during postweaning;

•Any combination of Limousin sire or dam will increase the amount of lean meat in the carcass. A Polled Hereford sire or dam decreases the amount of lean meat. Simmental carcasses are usually of top good quality.

For more information on genetics in the beef industry, read Comerford's column, Beef Briefs, in last week's "D" section, page 2.

Understanding grade, yield

Some farmers have turned to selling their beef on the rail, which has some definite advantages over standard sales methods. "Producers will get a consistant price and know the exact weight of their animal," explained Dr. Bill Henning, Penn State extension red meats specialist. "This method also often provides the best price for colored cattle. Packers like buying on the rail because they know exactly what they're buying."

A carcass's grades are determined by a USDA grader at the packing plant. The grader will select the quality grade, which are prime, choice, and select, as well as the yield grade, which are numbered 1 through 5 with one being the leanest and five the fattest.

"Quality grades are based on marbling and maturity, which is measured by the bone's degree of hardness and the color of the lean meat," Henning said. Marbling is the main concern in rating for quality.

Yield grades are based primarily on the amount of fat a carcass carries. The fatter the animal, the higher the yield grade number. Yield grades also are based somewhat on the rib-eye area, weight, and kidney fat.

Using TMRs

"There isn't any one best feeding system for all farmers," Dr. Harold Harpster, Penn State ruminant specialist, told attendees. Just as variables such as machinery, storage and feeding equipment, and facilities differ widely from one producer to another, so do feeding systems.

Total mixed rations (TMRs) is a feeding system that works well for a great number of farmers. "TMRs help farmers maintain a feed inventory, be better bunk managers, and feed cattle more easily. They also complement feeds, help control dust, and mask unpalatable feed," Harpster stated.

Many of the facts available on TMRs are based on studies performed by those in the dairy industry. One study found that 65 percent of dairy farmers who switched to a TMR feed system got a positive overall response in terms of milk production and feed efficiency.

The main advantage to using a TMR, according to Harpster, is that every bite an animal takes is balanced. A balanced diet offers increased performance, fewer off-feed problems, and prevents selectivity.

Not all farmers would benefit from a TMR though, Harpster added. When deciding whether or not to change feeding systems, a producer should weigh the pros and cons. The disadvantages to TMRs are that installing one often means new, specialized equipment, the farmer must be careful in weighing and mixing the ration, remodeling the facility to allow for the system could be too expensive, and the farmer must find another way to feed hay.

Cattle Producers

Predicting the future

H. Louis Moore, Penn State extension economist, held a discussion revolving around "crystal ball gazing, forecasts, and other witchcraft" on the cattle industry.

There has been a steady improvement in the agricultural economy since April of last year, according to Moore. The first sign of improvement came from the export sales of grain. Other factors causing the more-rosy economic picture include, the turnaround in farm land values, especially in the Midwest; the decoupling of farm program payments; and the continuing exodus of farmers from the industry.

Moore predicted that corn prices would be somewhat higher due to lower production. "We are not in a surplus situation," he said. "Feed is going to be a more expensive element of cattle production."

With respect to the cattle industry, Moore related, "we're cutting the supply enough that prices will stay fairly good this year."

Cattle issues in D.C.

Cattle Feeder's Day was closed with a discussion from Tom Cook, a member of the National Cattleman's Association. Cook outlined several of the main pocketbook issues that the association will be dealing with in Washington D.C.:

•A bill has been proposed that will charge user fees in the meat inspection program. Packers no doubt will pass this cost on to producers, Cook predicted. "We're opposed to user fees for those programs that are required by law."

•Animal-rights activists have been aggressive of late. "We're trying to stay on top of the problem," Cook said. "We have assembled a committee to answer their questions and complaints. In addition, we will try not to allow them to disrupt our national convention and other meetings.

•The current trade agreement with Japan expires on March 1. "We want to have the same opportunity to sell our product in their market as they have in ours."

•Meat grading: "We anticipate that this spring the Department of Agriculture will offer a proposal to decouple the requirement that meat be quality and yield graded at the same time," Cook stated. Some packers would like to do hot-fat trimming, which is easier and less time consuming than the standard practice.

•An endangered species act has been tied in with some groundwater legislation. "The Environmental Protection Agency has a list of all the endangered species. They will decide what chemicals and pesticides can be used in an area occupied by endangered animals. Many of these chemicals are products the EPA already has approved."

Should I Feed Moldy Grain To My Chickens?

Molds are everywhere; they can be found in the soils in all regions of the world. Molds grow on grains, forage, silage and mixed feeds because these items contain all the nutrients needed by the molds. When molds grow on feedstuffs they reduce those nutrients needed by the poultry. Also, certain molds have adverse effects on animals because the mold secretes poisonous substances called mycotoxins. The mold produces mycotoxins to prevent bacteria from destroying the mold when it is growing.

There are over 100 different types of mycotoxins known. Most of them have not been studied, so that we know very little about them. Mycotoxins that have been studied in poultry, and that are the most economically important to the industry, are aflatoxins, ochratoxins and fusariotoxins. The molds producing aflatoxins and ochratoxins grow best in hot humid weather and are therefore more of a problem in the southern part of the United States than in Pennsylvania. Although they can be a problem in Pennsylvania when hot, humid weather persists and feed or feed ingredients are in storage for a long period of time, there is very little evidence that these mycotoxins are much of a problem to Pennsylvania agriculture.

Far and above the greatest problem in Pennsylvania are the molds that produce fusariotoxins. This state is ideal for Fusarium mold growth -- mild temperatures and high humidity. Mycotoxin production generally occurs at temperatures between 55 and 75 F. A cool, wet harvest is ideal for mold growth and toxin production.

There is a considerable amount of literature indicating the harmful effects on poultry of Fusarium toxins. One of the well-known Fusarium toxins is T-2, a trichothecene produced by cultures of Fusarium sporotrichioides and F. Poae. In poultry, oral and gastrointestinal lesions have been described as a result of feeding this toxin. The oral lesion has been described as a yellowish-white sore located either along the side of the beak or at the corners of the mouth. Abnormal feathering, reduced growth, poor feed consumption and impaired right reflex have also been reported in broilers consuming T-2 toxin.

In 1983, samples of good quality shelled field corn were collected from producers of poultry feed in Pennsylvania. The corn grown represented 12 counties in Pennsylvania, 4 in Maryland and 1 in Virginia. Plant pathologists at Penn State cultured and identified Fusarium species from the corn samples. The number of colonies of Fusarium species recovered ranged from 1 to 109 per sample. Only two samples were very low in Fusarium colonies. The predominant species recovered was Fusarium moniliforme. Twenty-five cultures were selected, sent to Dr. Marasas in South Africa, and tested for toxicity on ducklings. Twenty-four of the cultures were toxic when ducklings were fed infected corn for 14 days.

It is well known that ducklings are more sensitive to toxins than chickens. Recently, at the University of Wisconsin, Fusarium moniliforme-infected corn was fed to broilers with no apparent effect. This does not mean you can feed moldy corn to your chickens. One gets the impression that the chicken is not sensitive to mold. In this case, the toxin may not have been in sufficient quantity to cause severe pathology.

The University of Wisconsin workers isolated the toxin fusarochromanone from fusarium equiseti. This toxin has been found to suppress immunity of young chickens. Therefore the bird's ability to fight disease could be compromised.

The problems with Fusariums are not going to disappear unless the corn breeders consider Fusarium resistance in their breeding program. Substituting small grains for corn is not the answer because the same Fusarium species infect wheat, barley and other grains. Therefore, storage of grains is extremely important to prevent mold growth. Grains should be clean, dry and well ventilated during storage.

Last year's corn is now in storage and the bins will soon be opened for use. If you see any caked, moldy corn where hot spots occurred, do not use that corn for your chickens. Throw it away. Adding antifungal agents to the corn or to the feed helps to prevent additional mold from growing; however, if the toxins are already present when grain is harvested, antifungal agents usually will not neutralize the effect of the toxins. Preventing mold growth is the only sure way of reducing mycotoxins in your feeds.

BUSINESS NEWS...

The new model 144 Windrow Inverter from Ford New Holland turns hay windrows bottoms-up to speed curing. The ground driven "144" lifts windrows with a 65-inch curved-tooth pickup. A wide belt conveyor places the crop on dry stubble. The wetter underside of the windrow becomes the top surface for exposure to air and sunlight.

NPPC, Swine Practitioners Launch Quality Assurance Program

DES MOINES, IA. — The National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) and the American Association of Swine Practitioners (AASP) have launched a Quality Assurance Program to help address drug use problems and other swine health considerations on the farm.

Steps to establish a national prudent drug use program were initiated by delegates at the NPPC Annual Meeting in March 1987. Strengthening the relationship between producers and veterinarians is viewed as the best method to encourage responsible, cost-effective drug usage.

"The pork industry needs to take an active role in solving drug-use problems to preserve the availability of animal health products and to strengthen consumers' image of pork as a safe, wholesome product," said Mike Wehler, a pork producer from Wisconsin and chairman of NPPC's Quality Assurance Committee. "This is a bold step by veterinarians and pork producers to call attention to a situation and take the necessary steps to help prevent market disruptions that would result from possible governmental withdrawal of medication now available for use in hog production," added Wehler.

Under the Quality Assurance Program, many veterinarians will participate by conducting an initial visit to review a producer's hog operation at no charge. The professional advice from this and subsequent visits should save producers money by more directly targeting the use of animal health products to the disease problems present.

"Because of growing consumer and governmental pressures concerning drug usage, this effort to strengthen the relationship between veterinarians and producers is viewed as the best method to encourage responsible, cost-effective drug usage and to enable pork to maintain its wholesome reputation at the consumer level," said Dr. Wayne Freese, AASP President.

It is important to remember that the U.S. meat supply is the safest in the world. Food and Drug Administration (FDA)-approved animal health products used in the proper manner are essential for livestock producers.

Ford New Holland Windrow Inverter Speeds Curing

NEW HOLLAND — The new model 144 Windrow Inverter from Ford New Holland turns windrows downside up to speed curing. Leaf and weather losses in both grass and legume hay crops are reduced.

In the process of inverting the windrows, the "144" offsets them to the dry stubble between the windrows. Joe Weicksel, product manager for hay tools at Ford New Holland, says this speeds curing two ways: by improved air circulation because the crop sits on top of the stubble; and by exposing the wetter portion of the windrow to the sun and air.

Leaf loss is minimized, he says, because the crop is lifted and carried with less shaking action than that of a side-delivery rake. This is particularly important for leafy legumes and for hay that has been hit by an unexpected shower because rained-on hay tends to be more brittle and subject to leaf loss.

Weicksel points out the "144" picks up less trash and foreign objects. The Super Sweep pickup of the new windrow inverter is less likely to pick up loose items that a rake might fold into the windrow. This feature is especially important for haylage makers.

Tye Announces New Soil Loosener

LOCKNEY, TX. — The Tye Company, a leader in grain drills and seeding for 25 years, announces its new model Paratill soil loosener. The new Paratill, equipped with safety-trip leg protection, allows the Paratill to operate in fields with rocks and stones.

When a deep obstruction is encountered, Paratill's safety-tip releases, allowing the leg to clear the obstruction. The operator easily resets the safety-trip mechanism without leaving the tractor seat.

Tye's new Paratill model retains its award-winning leg design. Paratill's 45° angled legs loosen soil to 14 inches deep without creating clods. Residues remain on top to control erosion. Paratill breaks up compaction in a single pass while leaving a level surface ready for planting. An equal number of left and right legs eliminate side-draft. Paratill is easy to lift, highly maneuverable and is used back and forth across fields instead of working in lands.

Paratill provides total or zone soil loosening. Total loosening is used for complete removal of hard pans and deep compaction. Zone loosening is used in row crops to loosen soil below the rows before planting without disrupting the growing area on top. Firm traffic lanes are maintained between the rows to support tractors, harvesters and other equipment. Fertilizer can also be deep-placed directly below the rows with optional equipment.

For complete information on Tye's new Paratill with safety-trip leg protection, contact Brian Inverarity at The Tye Company, PO Box 218, Lockney, TX 79241. Or call 806-652-3367.

INCOME SPLITTING AND INSTALLMENT SALES: TOOLS FOR TAX MANAGEMENT

Income splitting - distributing income among family members - is a useful tax management tool for some farm families. This process is most valuable if the farm family includes children who are involved in the farming operation. However, there is some benefit even if the family is a married couple without children.

Shifting a share of farm sales to children can reduce taxable income for adults in the family. This shift can be accomplished by permitting children to own some of the livestock. Children may also plant and harvest a share of the crops, with the resulting livestock or crop sales becoming the children's income. The children must, however, pay expenses involved in production.

Payment of reasonable wages to children is another useful tax management practice. This practice moves income from a higher-bracket taxpayer (the parent) to a lower-bracket taxpayer (the child). It also reduces social security tax since the income that would have been taxed as self-employment earnings to the parent is transferred to the child with no FICA due on wages paid by the parent to the child. (A note of caution is in order here; by reducing self-employment tax, the taxpayer may subsequently also experience reduced social security benefits. Each individual should consider his or her specific situation in making this decision).

Payment of wages by one spouse to another is somewhat more controversial than wage payments to children. While payments from one spouse to another have been employed by farm families to reduce self-employment tax, a court case in 1984 raises disturbing questions about the practice. The tax court required payment of self-employment tax on wages that a farm operator paid to his spouse. In this case, the wife was found to be a co-owner of farm business assets and a material participant in the business, thus functioning in the capacity of a self-employed person rather than that of hired labor.

In contrast to the above case, a spouse who is not a material participant in the farm business and who does not own a share of the farm assets, could be paid wages which would not be subject to either self-employment or FICA tax. In this instance, payments to the spouse would reduce the total tax obligation.

The errors related to payments to the spouse result from the typical situation in which the farm business includes property owned jointly by husband and wife, but all farm earnings are reported on one schedule F. The earnings from the schedule F are usually considered self-employment earnings for the husband.

A more accurate approach to filing the farm return, when jointly owned property is used in the business, is to divide earnings based on the relative shares of ownership of the spouses. If both spouses materially participate, then each should file a schedule F with a pro-rata share of income and expenses. Each would then file a self-employment schedule, based on their individual schedule F, and pay self-employment tax on their share of earnings.

If a spouse owns a share of business assets, but is not a material participant in the business, earnings from the owned assets may be reported as rent. A convenient way to report in these situations is to complete a form 4835 for the person who is not a material participant. The form 4835 facilitates reporting a pro-rata share of income and expenses using an approach similar to the way these are reported on the schedule F. Net farm profit from the form 4835 is transferred to the schedule E and then to the form 1040. Since there is no business form filed in this instance, no self-employment tax will be due on the amount reported from the form 4835.

Using the Installment Sale to Reduce Income Tax

The installment method of selling property offers a tax benefit to the seller because it spreads sale proceeds over two or more years instead of concentrating them in one year. This feature permits greater benefit from the standard deduction and personal exemptions and deductions. The result can be a smaller tax obligation.

Installment sales are especially appealing to retiring and financially well-to-do farmers. Installment sales can help these farmers benefit from "bracket depression" by keeping them in the lowest percentage tax bracket.

Taxable income from an installment sale is generally reported in the year received. In most cases, each installment includes a recovery-of-investment portion as well as a gain or profit portion. Only the profit is taxable.

The taxable share of an annual installment is computed by multiplying the installment payment and a factor called the gross profit percentage. The gross profit percentage is the ratio of gross profit from the sale to the contract price. The contract price is equal to the selling price unless the buyer assumes a mortgage. If the buyer assumes a mortgage, the contract price is less than the selling price by the amount of the mortgage.

The Tax Reform Act of 1984 provides an exception to the general rules that determine the tax effects of installment sales, in cases where the property sold is depreciable property. If the asset sold is subject to section 1245 or 1250 depreciation recapture (meaning the property was depreciated and then sold for more than the book value or "basis"), the amount recaptured must be reported and is taxed in the first year of the installment period. This gain previously was taxed when received — a procedure that spread the tax burden over a period of years.

The new rules provide for a basis increase in an amount equal to the gain recaptured and reported. The increased basis may then be used to compute the gross profit percentage, which, in turn, is used in determining the part of each installment to be included in income.

Example:

To illustrate the installment sale reporting procedure based on the new rules, assume machinery purchased in 1984 that originally cost $20,000 is sold for $12,000 on July 7, 1987. Payment includes three annual installments of $4,000 plus interest. The buyer assumes no mortgage, so the contract price is the same as the selling price. The adjusted basis of the machinery is $8,400. The difference between the adjusted basis and the cost is due to cost recovery (depreciation) deductions of $11,600.

Gain on the sale is $3,600; this is a section 1245 gain and is taxed as ordinary income. The entire gain must be reported and is taxed in year one of the installment period.

The basis (undepreciated cost of the machinery), is adjusted in the amount of $3,600. Therefore, the adjusted basis is $8,400 plus $3,600 or $12,000. This amount equals the sale price, so profit received after the basis adjustment is zero. There is no taxable gain as additional annual installments are received in years two and three.

When there is no section 1245 gain to report (as would be the case if the asset were not depreciated), the approach is somewhat different. For example, assume that land is sold for $12,000 and payment includes three installment payments of $4,000 plus interest. The contract price equals the sale price and the buyer assumes no mortgage. The adjusted basis of the land is $8,400. The gross profit percentage (the ratio of gross profit to the contract price) is $3,600 divided by $12,000, or 30 percent. The share of each $4,000 payment to be reported as gain is $4,000 times 0.30 or $1,200.

In the absence of an installment sale, the transaction described above would have produced gain of $3,600 in one year. The installment method spreads the gain over three years, permitting maximum use of the standard deduction and personal exemption to offset income and reduce the resulting tax obligation.

Cargill To Award Scholarships

MARIETTA — One hundred and fifty high school seniors from farm families throughout the United States will be awarded $1,000 college scholarships this spring by the Cargill Scholarship Program for Rural America. This program, now in its third year, is designed to recognize and encourage academic achievement, accomplishments and talents of young people from U.S. farm families and to help them get started with their post-secondary educations. The sponsoring Cargill Foundation is a philanthropic arm of Cargill, a Minneapolis-based agribusiness company.

To qualify, students must have plans for full-time enrollment this year at an accredited two or four-year college, university, or vocational-technical school. An independent national scholarship service organization manages the selection process, which is based on several criteria including academic records, leadership and extra-curricular accomplishments.

Scholarships are limited to two per community. Local high schools and Cargill offices have further information and application forms. Children of Cargill employees are not eligible.

By Newton Bair

Taxes- And Your Financial Health

If I had a choice between the two surest events in our lives, I'd definitely take taxes rather than death. We hope that both can be postponed as long as possible, but while we ignore the one, we must face the other head-on in April. Life does go on after the fifteenth.

Most of us worry too much about how to outwit the IRS. The best way, of course, is to have so little income that you owe very little or no tax at all. Trouble is, poverty isn't that much fun either. As a general rule, the more income you have the more tax you pay, but there is also more left over for yourself after taxes.

It's best that we don't even count those dollars that go to Uncle Sam. When they are withheld from the pay check or the investment fund, we never see those dollars anyway. Quarterly estimated taxes are paid like any other bill, if we are lucky enough to have projected income for the year. But pity the poor soul that spends the money that IRS claims, even before it is earned! He's narrowing the gap between those two most inevitable events; taxes and death.

I do not prepare income tax returns professionally, but have worked as a volunteer on the VITA (Volunteer Income Tax Assistance), and TCE (Tax Councelling for the Elderly) programs for several years. These programs are designed to assist the low income and elderly persons to prepare their income tax returns. Even with little or no tax to pay, they often have credits or refunds due, making it necessary to file a return. They need all the help they can get. Tax forms have never been simple to figure out.

After attending the intensive training required for working in these programs this year, I should be ready for anything. The new SIMPLIFIED!,??!! tax law is the most complicated we have ever had. I really think that every member of Congress should be required to prepare his own Income Tax return this year, so they can appreciate how complex they have made the law. Unfortunately, they are not yet finished with mutilating the rules, and neither is IRS. It should be an interesting year for tax preparers.

Taxes are as necessary and inevitable as life itself. We can be thankful that, so far, US taxes are not nearly as high as those imposed by many other Countries. And we still get pretty decent government for our dollars, I think. We should be thankful that we live in this great land, and have the opportunities that we have in a land of freedom.

Complaining about taxes is one way of relieving some of our other frustrations. Most of our financial problems, for example, come from some difficulty other than taxes. But we tend to lump money problems together and blame them on taxes, when in fact, without taxes there would be no government and probably no free enterprize to support employment and business.

Modern farm management demands that good financial records be kept. They must be more detailed than a general profit and loss statement. The bookkeeper on a modern farm is as important as the fellow who plows the fields or milks the cows. And the bookkeeper must read the records properly and make corrections in management that will assure a profit. And if the farm makes a profit, taxes will be due. When taxes are due, the probability of a profit from the farm is that much greater. Don't make the mistake of increasing debt just to avoid taxes. It is a pretty dumb thing to do, but some still do it.

If it were not for the necessity of keeping financial records for Income Tax purposes, some farmers would not keep any records at all. In todays world, tax records are not enough for good management, but are at least a start. So, remember the positive things about taxes, and be thankful that you are one who can pay your way in the world

4 He told John he saves time fuel seed fertilizer and chemicals by using radar to measure his exact ground speed Since getting his third speeding ticket John says using any radar is cheating

5 Every night Bill hand calculates his fuel efficiency area worked and other performance figures He says anyone who d get an M-F Datatronic tractor to instantly display all these numbers is cheating

6 He told Jack his tractor has an auto-pilot to help operate the PTO differential lock, implement depth and 4WD functions Jack misunderstood him and is now telling people that anyone who needs a co-pilot shouldn t be farming

7 He told Tom that he should buy a new M-F 3600 Se ries tractor for excellent dealer service and the opportunity to join the exclusive MF Club which offers special discounts on everything from filters to vacations Tom thinks this is too good to be true

8 Peggy noticed he s wearing a new Massey-Fer guson digital wrist watch He claims he got it free She thinks he stole it

Is this man cheating or just smart?

Could a new M-F 3600 Series Autotronic/Datatronic tractor really give you all these advantages?

Weather Information Customized For Farmers, Ranchers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A computer in the future will give daily climate information for specific locations of farms and ranches, based on historical weather data, says a U.S. Department of Agriculture researcher.

Farmers and ranchers will pull their specific weather reports from CLIMATE, a new microcomputer program, said David A. Woolhiser of USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

Woolhiser, who developed the program, said it analyzes historical weather data to simulate "what is most likely to happen locally." He said the data comes from 40 years of National Weather Service records, including temperature and precipitation.

National Weather Service data for its stations in South Dakota was the first to be adapted to make local predictions, Woolhiser said. CLIMATE can be worked out for other states, he said. The program is on floppy disks available from Woolhiser.

A farmer or rancher gets a "customized daily outlook" that offers a wider weather picture, he said. That outlook can be used with Weather Service forecasts, which rely on current information, he added.

"CLIMATE can help a farmer or rancher compute the odds on future weather in deciding when to plant, irrigate, spray pesticide or harvest crops," he said.

"A farmer tells the computer his farm's exact location by positioning a dot or cursor representing his farm on a map of the state shown on the monitor," said Woolhiser, a hydraulic engineer at the agency's Aridland Watershed Management Research laboratory, Tucson, Ariz.

"For each farm, the computer program selects appropriate weather characteristics from data at nearby weather stations," he said.

Advances in microcomputers during the past five years have made customized weather information practical for the first time. His program will run on computers that farmers and ranchers already use to help make business decisions. He wrote CLIMATE in the widely used BASIC language.

Woolhiser said his program also could be used to give accurate local rainfall patterns during the design of irrigation and drainage systems. It also could provide accurate local temperature patterns in the design of solar and conventional heating systems.

4-H Chick Project Hatches New Life, New Behavior

BY HERBERT C. JORDAN
Associate Professor Of Poultry Science
Penn State

Hatching chicks in the classroom is an amazingly winning project, say parents and teachers who've experienced it. Now, 27,309 students and 780 teachers participate in Embryology projects yearly in Pennsylvania.

While watching new life make its appearance in the world, the students alter their own life patterns. Imagine an 11-year-old completing a 21-day project in the classroom that improves the child's attitude, behavior and scholarly endeavor.

Teachers report that when a class finishes the 4-H embryology project, 10 percent to 20 percent of the students have improved their behavior. Teachers observe, during the course of the project, that troublesome children stop fighting and become cooperative; bullies settle down and behave as model students, giving attention to the teacher; children with excess energy spent in mischief turn to work in school; youngsters with criminal records begin to behave and look forward to the care of the fragile, young embryos as the eggs are turned three or five times (necessarily an odd number) a day in the incubator.

Further, teachers note that slow learners, mentally retarded or emotionally withdrawn children begin to share and participate in class. School nurses notice less child illness and fewer absenteeism among all students when chicks are about to hatch.

All students pay attention to the needs of the young lives in the incubator, and school work becomes enjoyable. Parents, teachers and students begin to share the excitement of chick-hatching day when they will see the awesome wonder of new life that grew 155,000 times its original weight in 21 days, from fertilized egg cell to chick.

Four primary requirements for the classroom project include:

1. An incubator that functions and hatches well.
2. A source of normal, clean, fertile eggs from a healthy, blood-tested flock of breeder chickens, such as Single Comb White Leghorns, that produce vigorous chicks. A hatchery list is available through your County Extension Office.
3. A competent, well-trained person who will manage the incubator, care adequately for the eggs and chicks, and who will be observant to problems if they should occur.
4. A number of students that can be managed, educated and handled easily.

If the above requirements are met, the only remaining need is a creative teacher who will enroll 4-H members in this project and complete a lesson plan of knowledge to be learned and experiences gained from hatching eggs.

The 4-H agent at your County Agricultural Extension Service Office can provide more information, and an embryology leader will instruct teachers in project details.

New Nitrogen Additive Protects Groundwater

SHAKOPEE, MN. — Conklin Company, Inc. is introducing Guardian™, a product revolutionary for the nitrogen fertilizer market. Guardian is a nitrogen fertilizer additive containing 66% nitrogen in a slow-release form, which will help curb groundwater contamination while increasing yields.

Groundwater contamination may be the most significant issue of the decade related to agricultural production. Applied nitrogen can leach out of the soil and cause nitrate contamination in groundwater supplies. A growing number of cities in southwestern Minnesota have nitrate contamination in their municipal water supplies. Public concern is rising over possible health effects of nitrates in groundwater.

Packaged in 50-pound bags, crystalline Guardian can be mixed with either liquid nitrogen solutions, suspensions or liquid manure, and can be applied in the fall or spring. It is the only product of its kind currently available direct to farmers for on-farm use.

WINTERTIME PROBLEMS

The year 'round problems of water damage and carbonizing of the fuel injection system become more acute during the cold winter season And, diesel engines now become exposed to another wintertime problem Waxing and Gelling Diesel fuel contains paraffin wax which develops into crystals as the temperature drops When crystals begin to form, the temperature is at "cloud point" The pour point of the fuel is the temperature at which the crystals have now formed into a lattice-type pattern, restricting fuel flow This is waxing and gelling, and it clogs filters and blocks fuel lines

POLAR POWER - THE ULTIMATE WINTERTIME TREATMENT

• POLAR POWER combines the advantages of FUEL POWER and FLOW IMPROVER by preventing water damage, the growth of algae, and the carbonizing of injection system AND by preventing waxing and gelling — giving you the ultimate wintertime product

Measure the Performance.

Purina Research In... Balancing High Performance Diets PROOF...IT WORKS!

When you milk excellent cows that produce up to 1,556 pounds of butterfat and you normally have seven to 10 cows in the herd that are milking over 100 pounds per day, you pay attention to your feeding program. That is why Herman, Clyde and Walter Bishop of Bishcroft Farms at Fountainville feed Purina concentrates with their home-grown feeds. Ever since they switched to Purina in September 1985, the Bishop brothers say they have seen an increase in production and the profitability of their 125 milking cow herd. And they have the records to prove it.

* Average daily milk production up from 49.5 pounds to 64.4 pounds
* Income over feed cost, per cow up from $1,343 to $1,687
* Increase of 3,221 pounds of milk, 118 pounds of fat and 138 pounds of protein per cow per year
* Rolling herd average now at 19,896, 3.7 percent, 743 fat and 3.4 percent protein

"Our cows are making money," Herman says. "And Nick Kohut, proprietor of Oley Valley Feed, takes an interest in our herd," Clyde adds. "He comes in every month to help us manage better. And it is obvious everyone around the Bishcroft Farm pays attention to details and keeps good records.

Purina D & H concentrate is fed to the dry cows at the rate of 1½ pounds per day during the dry period. Two weeks before freshening, they switch to the total mixed milking ration with Purina dairy concentrate that is based on 55 pounds of milk per day. Cows milking above the base level are fed their individual additional needs from a computer programmed feeding system.

When you milk an additional nine pounds per cow per day by changing feed, you naturally give a lot of credit to Purina dairy concentrates and the D & H dry cow concentrate," the Bishop brothers say.

These Old Barns Have A Story To Tell

BY GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Adams Co. Correspondent

CARLISLE — Nancy Van Dolsen is a city-girl from Philadelphia that has always loved building and American History. This young lady's educated eye for architectural design and a learned love for her new home in this area are being utilized to help preserve agricultural history in Cumberland County.

Van Dolsen is the Project Director of the Cumberland County Resource Survey in conjunction with the Cumberland County Historical Society. Her work is the result of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 which requires the states to survey and research all structures built before 1940 to determine which sites might be eligible of the National Registry of Historical Places.

Work in Cumberland County started in July of 1984 and is scheduled for completion this summer. Similar work is currently being done in Clinton County. Of the 67 counties in the state, only 11 have been completed, while some project work has been done in 41 counties. The program is funded by matching grants-in-aid to the states for historical resource surveys and planning projects.

To date Van Dolsen and an assistant have surveyed over 10,000 sites in Cumberland County, of which about 1200 building were further researched. The type of sites included in the survey have been barns dating from 1760 to 1910, industrial sites, such as grain mills, brick kilns and even a blacksmith shop, bridges, and all 18th Century building still in tact.

While all this would seem to be distant from today's farming picture in the county, Van Dolsen stresses that the project has several benefits for the community. In documenting her work, funds donated by the Cumberland County Farm Women have been utilized to prepare a slide presentation on the farm sites, the means of construction, and agricultural practices and concerns of the day. Van Dolsen has presented these slides to groups like Farm Women, the Rotary Club, and local classrooms.

Van Dolsen has found that this has helped to heighten the community's historical awareness, stressed the need for preservation of not only the farms but the rural structures, and has stressed the importance of agriculture in the county's history.

Having already viewed 10,000 sites and just now finishing her master's degree work with the University of Delaware in American history with an emphasis on early architecture, Van Dolsen has a pretty good idea what a site might Nancy Van Dolsen, Project Director of the Cumberland County Resource Survey points out a 13' long stone in the end of one of Cumberland County's most beautiful stone-end barns. The barn was built in 1858 by Jacob Waggoner. The stone mason, Steve Losh, carved his name in the stone. Losh was from Perry County.

This brick-end barn was built by Jacob Mumma in 1861. It is located in Monroe Township in Cumberland County. Brick-end barns are found only in central Pa and northern Maryland in this country. Historians still do not know where the designs for these barns originated.

date on the county records. Still, she follows a set process for each survey.

The survey's work is divided into municipalities. Working with geological maps and inserting dots and marks from previous county census, she can determine all structures built before 1952.

Van Dolsen then drives to the site and requests permission from the owner to take an exterior photo of the site. Van Dolsen stated that with the advance press releases and heightened interest in the project's work, most people have been very cooperative.

She then interviews the present owner for information on the records and dates of ownership and asks about any uusual architectural features they might be aware of. Van Dolsen notes that she has become very proficient at recognizing additions or window changes that might foretell of an earlier dating than the present owner may have realized.

Once she has determined that a site warrants further investigation, a detailed survey form is completed. This form includes such information as the date of original construction, period, style, description, significance, and bibliography. Copies of the survey are then sent to the state, the owner, the municipality, and one is retained for her file.

Finding such information on each site is no small task. Van Dolsen revealed that the 1798 Direct Tax was based on the number of windows a structure contained, so this serves as one of the benchmarks for dating a structure. Other sources she uses are deeds, tax assessment records, wills, Orphan's Court records, county newspapers, and genealogy files.

Van Dolsen lists as her most historically significant find the discovery of the home of General William Thompson. Thompson, who had a colorful military career during the American Revolution, was known as an Indian Trader, and surveyor. Locating his home has attracted both local and federal interest.

She explained, "The house is very small, but is totally intact. No one even knew it was there. The property is owned by an absentee landlord. It's surprising that the building wasn't torn down by now."

Another interesting site was the discovery of a local blacksmith shop. Two generations of the same family worked there and had their names carved on the exterior of the door. When she surveyed the site she found tools that were 130 years old, all ranked in place near the forge and bellows.

Still, the sites Van Dolsen finds attracts most people's attention are the old barns in the county. These include log barns, brick-end barns, stone-end barns, and Pennsylvania frame bank barns.

The survey has found only 12-15 standing log barns in the county and most of these were on the western side. Van Dolsen feels sure there are more of these type barns standing but most have been covered with another material. These barns were the easiest to construct and expand and served a variety of purposes.

The locality's brick-end barns are the most unique architectural design in this area. Brick-end barns are found only in northern Maryland and central Pennsylvania. Stated Van Dolsen, "No one knows for sure where the patterns for the brick-end barns originated. There is a honeycomb or wheat sheath pattern found on some barns in England, but we don't know anything about the other patterns."

Stone-end barns in the county date from 1780 to 1860. The ends and foundations of these barns were constructed of limestone or field stone. The stone could be rough or smooth cut. Van Dolsen noted that often a farmer had the end of his barn facing the road more finished than the end away from the road. Sometimes only the end facing the road was done in stone and the other end might be framed. This reveals the pride a farmer took in his barn and the good impression he hoped a handsome barn might make on passersby.

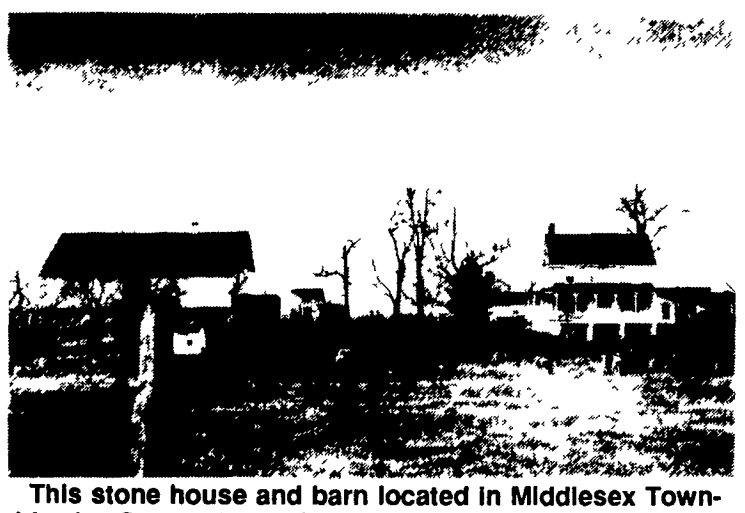
Pennsylvania frame bank barns are by far the vast majority of the barns found in the county according to Van Dolsen. These barns were erected between 1860 and 1920. They range in size from the smallest being 30' by 40' to the largest at 40' by 80'. Their style includes both English type and full Pa. bank barn lay-outs.

One site that has drawn considerable public interest is the Frederick Watts Farm located just north

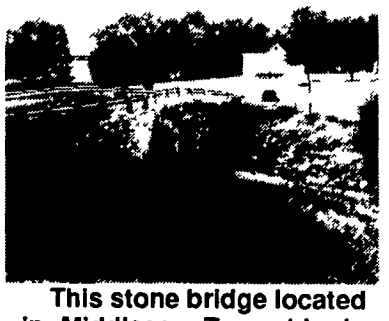
(Turn to Page E3)

This shows the detailed framing of a stone barn in Monroe Township in Cumberland County. This barn has been demolished since this picture was taken.

This is the Frederick Watts Farm located in North Middleton Township. This was built as a model tenant farm in the mid-1800's by the man who founded Penn State University. The 100 acre farm is scheduled to be paved over by ABF Trucking Company to put in the country's largest truck terminal.



This stone house and barn located in Middlesex Township in Cumberland County typifies the agricultural architectural design prevalent of farmsteads in south central PA.



This stone bridge located in Middlesex Township in Cumberland County is one of the few which still survive. It was built in the late 19th Century. The State wanted to tear it out and put in a newer one since it does not meet current standards. The Zeigler Families how farm here are now maintaining its upkeep.

The side-wall and enterior framing of the Frederick Watts' PA Bank Frame Barn shows the quality of workmanship used that has kept this barn standing for over 130 years.

ADADC To Examine Dairy Promotion Programs

SYRACUSE, NY — "Reaching Regional Markets" is the theme for the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council's (ADADC) 28th Annual Meeting being held February 17th at the Sheraton Inn in Syracuse, New York. Dairy producers representing New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania will meet in order to review the advertising and promotion programs implemented by ADADC.

The meeting's theme focuses on the regionalization of dairy marketing efforts. Regionalization is becoming a significant trend in the way businesses conduct their marketing programs. According to a recent article in Advertising Age, most major companies are shifting away from national mass marketing to a regionalized approach. A panel of four experts will present local examples of this type of marketing direction during the afternoon session of the annual meeting.

Phil Lempert will be guest speaker at ADADC's annual meeting February 17.

For the evening banquet, Phil Lempert, founder of The Lempert Company, a full-service advertising agency specializing in the food industry, will be the guest speaker. He will be addressing the topic, "Reaching Regional Markets" and how it applies to the local dairy industry.

A prominent industry spokesperson, Lempert has been an adjunct professor at Seton Hall Univeristy and at Fairleigh Dickinson University, lecturing on the fine points of advertising and marketing. He is publisher as well as trends analyst for the nationally recognized industry newsletter, The Lempert Report. Lempert is frequently quoted in major media and is a regular guest on major radio and TV programs.

The meeting will begin at 10:30 a.m. and the evening banquet is scheduled for 7:00 p.m. All local dairy farmers, as well as dairy industry representatives, are invited to attend.

For more information on ADADC's annual meeting, contact the ADADC at (800) ADA-MILK (in New York) or (800) HOT-MILK (in New Jersey and Pennsylvania). The ADADC is a dairy promotion organization representing 20,000 dairy producers from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

of the boro. Watts was a primary agricultural reformer in the state in the mid-1800's. He founded the Farmers High School, which is known today as The Pennsylvania State University. He brought the first McCormick reaper into Cumberland County as well as introducing several new varieties of wheat seed to the area. He also founded the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society.

The Frederick Watts Farm was an agricultural model in its day in both the design of the buildings and in the farming methods Watts advocated. The buildings were erected from 1857 to 1867. This was to be a model tenant farm, as Watts chose to live closer to his law practice in Carlisle.

Two years ago the farm was sold to ABF Trucking Company who plans to build the largest truck terminal in the country here, 800 bays with a truck wash and a service center. All the existing buildings will be torn down. Van Dolsen stated that if ABF would put in only a 350 bay terminal the farm buildings could be saved.

Local residents formed a group called Citizens for Responsible Development and are presently fighting to stop ABF's plan on the premise the zoning in this area calls for light industrial development and this terminal does not fall in that category. Local folks are also concerned with contamination of their underground water sources since the farm is known to have a number of sink holes.

Van Dolsen relates that she never thought the work she has done for the survey would be so closely tied to a current public problem. However, she readily acknowledges that she hopes her work, combined with the concerns of local citizens, can help raise community conscious for the need to preserve the county's agricultural heritage while planning for the county's growth.

York 4-H Baby Beef Club Presents Citation Award

BY JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

SEVEN VALLEYS — Gordon and Dianna Shive were named York 4-H Baby Beef Club's 1988 Citation Award recipients, during the annual awards banquet held January 30 at the Seven Valleys Fire Hall.

The Seven Valleys couple are long-time supporters of the beef club and county 4-H programs. As a 4-H'er, Gordon was president both of the beef club and County Council, and was a member of the state Livestock Judging Team.

He continued sharing the knowledge and skills acquired as a 4-H member by serving as an adult leader, and working with the livestock teams. Both he and Dianna have been leaders of the Jefferson Community Club. Dianna has served on the county 4-H Advisory Committee and 4-H Fair Board.

The Shive's frequently host beef club training events, club meetings, and provide classes of cattle for livestock judging practice at their Buffalo Valley Angus operation.

Purebred Angus cattle breeders and exhibitors, both have held offices in the Pennsylvania Angus Association. Gordon is a past president of the breed organization and Dianna has served several terms as treasurer. They bred both the champion and reserve champion bred and owned steers exhibited at the 1987 Pennsylvania Angus Breeders show.

Gordon and Dianna's three daughters, Chris, Cathy and Robin, have continued the family's enthusiasm for the 4-H program. All three are successful project and open class Angus exhibitors, and take active roles in a variety of beef, community and county club events.

Winner of the Roll Call awards, based on members' presentation and management information given at each club meeting, was Sue Eisenhour. Others recognized with awards were Cathy Shive, second; John Eaton, Jr., third; Robin Shive, fourth; and Sandy Eisenhour and Sonja Shearer, tied for fifth place.

Rookie awards for the Roll Call went to Wade Myers, first, and Jennifer Altobelli, second.

Over Order Premiums Soften Support Price Cuts

BY TOM JURCHAK

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.)— By now everyone in the dairy industry should know that on January 1 the support price for milk was dropped 50 cents from $11.10 to $10.60 for milk of 3.67 percent butterfat or $10.33 for 3.5 percent butterfat. These are to be the target prices for the national average of manufacturing grade milk. To achieve this the Commodity Credit Corporation has announced their purchase prices for butter, powder and cheese. The butter price was dropped 3.75 cents to $1.32 a pound; the powder price is down four cents to 72.75 cents and 40 pound blocks of cheese are down 4.75 cents to $1.15 a pound. The lowered support price was made to comply with the Farm Security Act of 1985 that required such a drop if CCC purchases in the next year were expected to be higher than five billion pounds of milk equivalent. Without a lower support price total purchases were expected to exceed seven billion pounds and with the lower price are still estimated at six billion pounds.

In addition to the lower price an assessment of 2.5 cents a hundred will be paid by producers to satisfy the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings legislation requiring cuts of 8.5 percent in spending on all government programs. This could have meant a drop of $1.05 in the support price for milk but because the milk price is supported indirectly through the CCC purchases of butter, powder and cheese the reqired cuts in program costs could be made with the assessment. These assessments are expected to produce $26 million this year but the cut in the support price would have cost dairy farmers $750 million. Price cuts or assessments are never welcomed by producers but in this case with both the 1985 farm bill and the G-R-H bill, things could have been worse when you consider that Congress was trying to reduce farm program costs by $3 billion this year. In addition, the support price cannot be changed again until next year and assessments, not price cuts must be used by G-R-H in the future.

Outlook

In spite of, or because of, the cut in the support price and the assessment, most forecasters don't see big changes in government programs in 1988. This will be the first time in five years that there haven't been one or more changes in support prices, assessments, diversions or buy outs. Under the present law the Secretary could start a diversion program in 1988 but it isn't likely at least not until he hears the final report from the National Commission on Dairy Policy that is due in April. Discussions on regional government programs for dairy will speed up but don't look for any new legislation this year. Even a diversion program may be avoided because of regional differences. Besides, if the dairy program is changed other commodity groups will be looking for consideration too. Increases in milk production expected next year will just about be used up by increases in consumption so the national supply/demand picture won't change much and government costs will be lowered by support price cuts and the assessment. That may be as good as you can expect in an election year so while there may be a lot of legislation proposed, reports made and analyzed; meetings conducted and ideas aired the most important thing to happen to influence the dairy industry next year may be the price of feed.

There is a Way

With government inaction for whatever reasons but mainly because it has provided the answer in other markets, over order pricing can be used to close the gap between lower prices and higher costs. It's the biggest obstacle to regional price support programs because everyone else in the country is using it except the northeast. Most dairymen nationally don't want more government control -- they want less -- so they use over order premiums to get from the market what that don't get from government programs. They organize cooperatives to regulate the over order premiums to insure that all dealers pay the same and all producers share equally. Here in the northeast RCMA is the vehicle for producers to use the same strategies in Order 2 in New York and Order 4 in New England. So far New England producers have participated in sufficient numbers to negotiate a 37 cent premium while Order 2 producers have ignored the opportunity in sufficient numbers to achieve only a nine cent premium. Some handlers in Order 2 have opposed the formation of RCMA by offering premiums directly to producers; discouraging them from joining RCMA and refusing to provide information on milk receipts for RCMA members. Many dealers who want to cooperate are discouraged by the few who refuse to participate. Withholding action could be the next step but even that will be less than effective if producers themselves don't participate in larger numbers. Premiums paid by handlers directly to producers serve to meet producer needs temporarily but may disappear with increasing milk supplies or the failure of RCMA.

Order 2 Prices

The real skid in Federal Order milk prices started in December with a 22 cent drop in the Minnesota-Wisconsin Price Series to $11.12. This is expected to continue until spring when it bottoms out at a support price of $10.33 for 3.5 milk. That's $1.09 less than the $11.42 when the M-W peaked last September. If you could make RCMA work and hold their price of $14.45 for Class I milk it would mean a premium of $1.57 on fluid milk or about 66 cents on the blend. Forecasters looking at Order 2 prices for 1988 are estimating a difference of 66 cents less in 1988 than 1987 considering all support price changes and assessments for both years. Fascinating arithmetic but it takes cooperation to make ends meet. The blend price for December in Order 2 was $12.21 or 48 cents less than November and 57 cents less than last year. It just widened the gap from last year by 21 cents from November to December. In September it was only four cents below the year before now it's 57 cents. Get ready for a longer and faster drop.

Total environment control for new and existing barns . . .

began four years ago in our facilities. Our poultry research team began by testing the Zone Station environmental control system under actual operating conditions on our birds.

The Zone Station has proved to be a reliable unit. It is equipped with the necessary safeguards, automatic alarms and backups to provide safe and effective control for your investment - your birds.

Designed to be easy to operate in the barn, the Zone Station System provides complete control and monitoring of your flock's vital statistics. Easily adapted to work with your current environmental control system, it is designed to work in your existing structures. And it can be tied into our Total Environment Plus system for complete barn management.

For a limited time, we are making a special introductory offer of PAL-TECH's new Zone Station System. For more information about this special offer or an information kit, please call Larry Pluta in Lancaster, PA at 717-394-7567.

York Salutes Agricultural Leaders

BY JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK — York County's agriculture history and leadership took center stage January 28 at the Chamber of Commerce's first annual Agriculture Recognition Banquet, at Rutter's Restaurant.

The Emory Kilgore family of Airville was saluted with the Farm Family award, and George Williams, Codorus Fertilizer Service, was named winner of the Distinguished Service to Agriculture award.

FARM FAMILY AWARD

Emory and Maybelle Jennes Kilgore began farming in 1929 with three horses, eight cows and a flock of 300 chickens. They purchased from Emory's mother 110-acres, owned by the family since 1804. Acquiring neighboring farms over the years, the Kilgore eventually expanded their acreage to more than 800 in the southeast corner of York County.

Sons Gene and Bill both returned home after college to dairy farm, each purchasing a farm from the Kilgore land. While each continues to maintain an independent dairy herd, the acreage is farmed together by Emory and his sons, cropped primarily to feed the two dairy herds.

Gene, Doris, and their son Doug milk 75 head of Holsteins. Doug and Pam's two daughters, Rebecca, 5, and Rachael, 3, are the fourth generation currently living on the Kilgore farm.

Bill and Daune's 75-head milking herd includes Holsteins and Brown Swiss. Daughters Lisa and Kelly Kilgore Miller assist with milking chores as needed.

The Kilgore family has maintained a long tradition of agriculture and community leadership.

Emory is a former county commissioner, having served from 1955-63. At age 85, he remains avidly interested in the political scene. He is a division director for Dairymen, Inc., and past corporate board director, director of the Baltimore-area Dairy Food and Nutrition Council and Southeast United Dairy Industry Association.

Kilgore has headed as president the Dairy Council, Mason-Dixon Lions Club, York County Agriculture Extension Service and York County Cow Testing Service, and served as a director for numerous others.

Maybelle is a former York County Society of Farm Women president, state Farm Women director and state scholarship chairman. Both she and Emory are active in various programs at the Chanceford Presbyterian Church and Sunday School.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE TO AGRICULTURE AWARD

George Williams founded his Codorus Fertilizer Service in 1964, on the site of the former Codorus Canning Company. Though a native of Philadelphia, his interest in agriculture traces to his boyhood summers spent on a small Chester County orchard his parents had inherited.

After earning a degree in animal science at Penn State, he served three years in Army military security. Prior to opening his own business, Williams worked for five years in Virginia for Southern States ag supply cooperative.

Codorus Fertilizer serves primarily local ag clientele, providing custom blending and spreading of fertilizer and lime, plus sales of seed and agriculture chemicals, and lawn and garden products.

Diversification balances the seasonal nature of the fertilizer business. Williams most recent venture is cleaning and packaging sunflower seeds, marketing to the booming interest in feeding wild birds. He has also begun tapping the export demand for sunflower seeds for human consumption. Codorus Fertilizer's first overseas sunflower seed shipment went out last Fall to Spain, where the roasted and salted seeds are a popular snack food.

Williams and his wife, Annaliese, have two daughters, ages 16 and 20. He serves on the board of PennAg Industries and the advisory board of Peoples Bank of Glen Rock. The York County Ag Extension Service honored him last year with its Outstanding Service award. He has been president of the Pennsylvania Inland Fertilizer Association, the York County Agriculture Extension Service and served on the council of Trinity Lutheran Church in Jefferson.

CENTURY FARMS

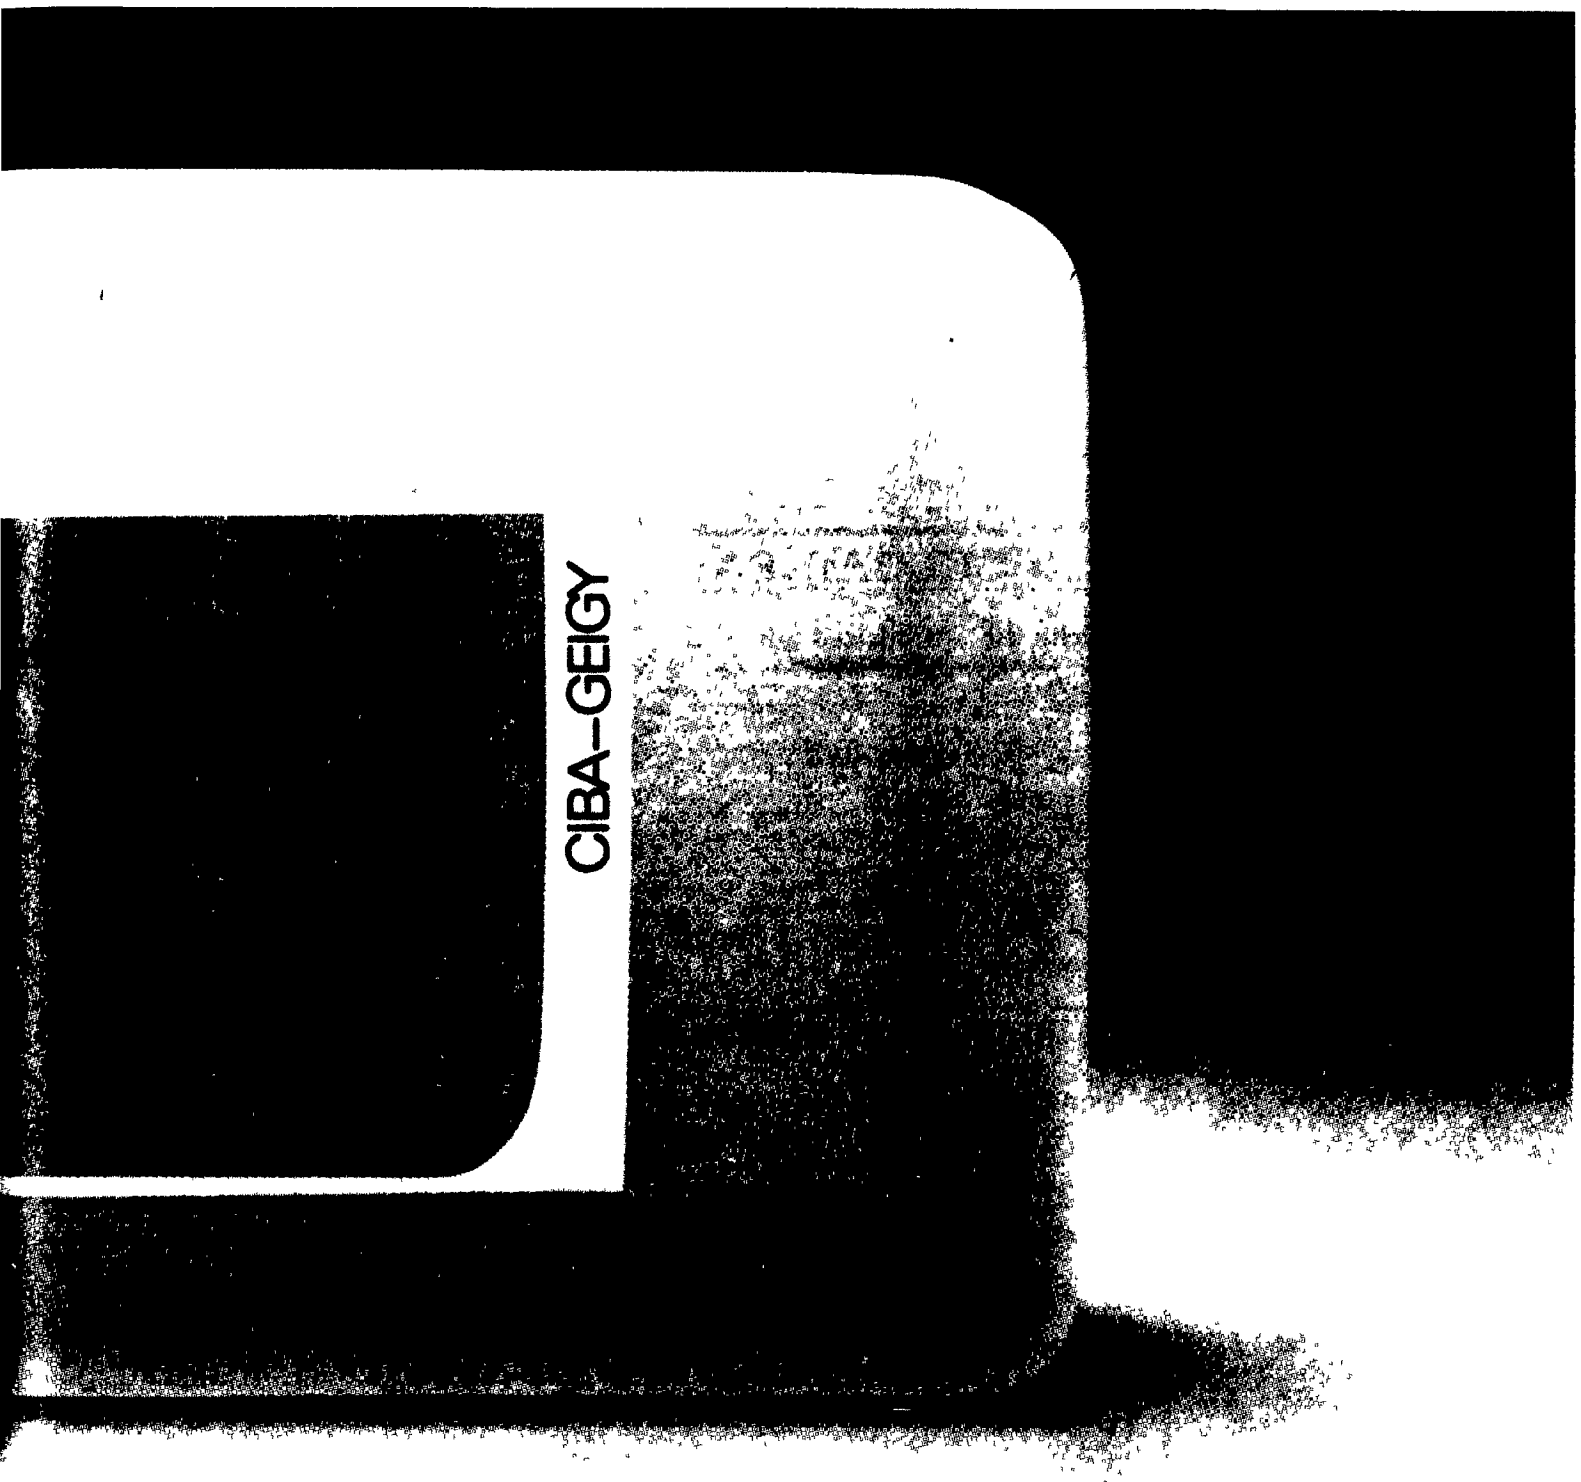
Honored during the recognition program were a dozen York County Century Farm, named to the prestigious honor in 1977-78. Since Century Farm owners in York County had never been officially honored, the Chamber will "catch up" saluting past recipients over the next few years.

Awarding the Century Farm plaques was Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff. In brief remarks prior to the presentations, Secretary Wolff noted that the Department's key goal is to help Pennsylvania farmers market their crops.

Century Farm owners receiving recognition certificates were John and Leslie Anderson, New Park, 1849; Richard and Marguerite Deardorff, Dillsburg, 1878; C. Robert Kilgore, Airville, 1827; Richard and C. Ruth Lanius, Stewartstown, 1869; Bruce W. and Lois Leathery, East Berlin, 1869.

Also, Mrs. Gladys Webb McGinnis, Fawn Grove, 1854; Samuel C. Miller, Jr., Lewisbery, 1849; Fredrick Sprenkle, York, 1734; Kenneth and Mildred Wambaugh, Stewartstown, 1836; Paul and Eunice Webb, Stewartstown, 1774; Paul W. and Mabel A. McPherson, New Park, 1867.

Speaker for the program was Wilmer D. "Vinegar Bend" Mizell, Assistant Secretary Governmental and Public Affairs, for USDA. Mizell, a 14-year pro-baseball player, for Pittsburgh and St. Louis, reminisced about his baseball career, and projected a more stable ag economy. He based his predictions on a $50-55 billion agriculture income projection for 1988, increasing real estate values, stabilizing production expenses, and farm debt loads on the decline.



REASONABLE RATES.

It stops disease on contact in the soil and it's absorbed by the roots of plants for systemic protection all season long. On a cost per acre basis, you can't buy better insurance against disease. And it pays off in healthier, better quality tobacco.

Forestry Manual Offered By USDA

UNIVERSITY PARK, PA. — Forestry researchers do it. Tree surgeons do it. And, now, almost anyone can diagnose tree injuries with the aid of a new manual.

"Diagnosing Injury to Eastern Forest Trees," published by the U.S. Department of Agriculture-Forest Service, was edited by four Penn State researchers: Drs. John M. Skelly, Donald D. Davis and William Merrill, professors of plant pathology, and Dr. E. Alan Cameron, professor of entomology.

"Today, there is a tendency to blame acid rain for causing injuries and deaths to trees," Skelly said. "While air pollution definitely is involved in injuring trees, the evidence is not sufficient to indict acid rain at this time.

"The manual is designed to help researchers and other people accurately diagnose tree injuries. This can be difficult because air pollutant-induced injury produces symptoms similar to some disease and insect damage."

The manual, which has 220 color plates, covers air pollution symptoms plus diseases, insects and other stresses brought on by frost, drought and other conditions. The editors were honored for their efforts with a citation and cash award from the USDA-Forest Service.

Merrill said, "Sometimes researchers focus on just one symptom of tree damage and fail to see the whole picture. The manual helps people make a better-informed diagnosis."

Prior to 1985, scientists generally suspected that acid rain was causing injuries to forests, but had conducted relatively few field evaluations to test the theory. In 1985, the National Acid Precipitation Assessment Program of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and USDA-Forest Service joined forces to begin studying the problem.

"We know, for example, that ozone is the most widespread air pollutant in the United States," Skelly said. "The other major pollutants affecting forests are sulfur dioxide and hydrogen fluoride."

Ozone is formed in ground-level air by the action of sunlight on hydrocarbons and oxides of nitrogen that have been emitted by industry and automobile sources.

Sulfur dioxide, which is toxic to vegetation, has been recognized as a danger to plants since the 1800s, the researchers said. It is emitted into the atmosphere when materials containing sulfur, such as fossil fuels, are burned.

Hydrogen fluoride and silicon tetrafluoride, the two most common forms of fluoride, are gases emitted during heating or chemical treatment of fluoride-containing rocks and minerals.

"We believe that these pollutants weaken and stress trees, making them more susceptible to disease and insect infestations that may ultimately kill the trees," Merrill said. "In this same way, acid rain may play a role, not necessarily the primary one, in killing trees."

"Diagnosing Injury to Eastern Forest Trees" is available by contacting Skelly at 108 Buckhout Lab, Penn State, University Park, Pa. 16802.

A German edition of the manual is in press. The manual is part of a U.S.-German cooperative research program on the forest decline problem. Sulfur dioxide and ozone are major pollutants affecting forests throughout the industrialized nations, Skelly noted.

BST Effects And Forage Loss Are Topics At Penn Jersey Dairy Expo

BY PAT PURCELL

ALLENTOWN (BERKS CO.) — Bovine Somatatrophin (BST) can increase milk production per cow per day on an average between 8 and 11 pounds depending upon dosage, according to Dr. David Galligan,of the University of Pennsylvania. Although that is a substantial increase in milk production and would also add sizeable income to the milk check, that apparently is not enough to convince dairy farmers that BST is for their cows.

Galligan spoke to a full house at the Penn-Jersey Dairy Exposition held in Allentown on Wednesday, concerning several studies being conducted on the effects of BST. The effects of BST appeared to be the main concern of the audience. Farmers were quick to question Galligan on its safety, health precautions, consumer concerns and its value to the farmer.

Galligan noted severals specifics about BST:

— Certain amounts of BST are already found in cows without an injection and is also found in their milk.

— Cows treated with BST produce milk which has the same level of BST in it as cows without the injections.

— Somatotrophin is not found in man.

— Somatotrophin is a protein and is digested as any other protein.

According to Galligan's studies, the amount of daily per cow increase in milk production depended upon the dosage administered and also the lactation number for the cow and also whether the cow was injected near day 30 or after day 100 into the lactation cycle.

BST can also have an effect on the lactation curve by increasing the peak milk production and by enabling the animal to level-off at a higher production rate which can have some bearing on culling.

But with the higher levels of milk production is there any efficiency lost in feed intake? Galligan said no.

"We found that the increased dry matter intake was in response to production. A cow producing 90 pounds of milk per day whether she was on BST or not would still consume the same amount of feed. However, the cow with the BST did have a higher efficiency rate. So we were spreading fixed costs over more units of production," explained Galligan.

More study and more data are needed to determine the effects of BST usage on reproduction. His study showed slight increases in reproduction problems with cows on BST, but, acording to Galligan, because the differences were so slight a much larger number of cows needed to be studied.

This study did not show any problem with ketosis or any other metabolic diseases. However, there was a significant increase in mastitis with high level doses of BST. But again, more research was needed to determine the effect.

In a separate but related study which simulated several dairy farm operations over a span of six years increases were from $.27 to $.64 in profit per cow per day. Also, he noted that the small producer could enjoy the same marginal increase as the larger producer.

BST use would enable the farmer to produce the same milk with fewer cows; more milk with same number of cows and also to keep cull cows longer. Galligan noted that more research needs to be conducted on the health and reproductive effects. Also, according to Dr. Lumin Kung of the University of Delaware, within the next six months the Eastern European Community will approve the use of BST. Galligan predicts that BST will be accepted in the United States in the early 1990's, but said the adoption rate by farmers was not so easy to predict.

Snake Oil and Foo Foo Dust

"There are too many products on the market labeled as forage preservatives and too little research that has been done. Beware! There's a lot of snake oil and foo-foo dust out there. You've got to do your homework," stated Dr. Lumin Kung, University of Delaware.

There is no way to prevent forage loss, but it can be discouraged with the proper use of good products. THe key is finding the right product and implementing good management procedures. Forage preservatives can help reduce loss if crop is harvested at the proper stage of maturity, is chopped at 1/4" to 3/8" and is stored in an air tight silo.

"The number one priority is to fill the silo rapidly and continously. This is number 1. Seal the silo immediately. If you are tired and have one last wagon to put in, do it. Otherwise when come out in the morning to do it, it will have already begun to deteriorate," said Kung.

Time of harvesting is crucial. Each day that forage is not harvested after bud stage equals 1 lb. of milk production per cow per day loss.

Also, hay drying agents in this area are necessary simply because there are not enough dry days to make hay. Drying agents can decrease the chance of weather damage and enable better leaf retention. Dry matter loss can be cut in half by mowing, conditioning, raking and applying a drying agent compared to mowing and raking three times before baling.

Drying agents are obviously less effective on the first cutting because there is so much moisture left in the ground from the spring thaw. Beware of the percentage of the mix. For instance propionic acid should be atleast 50-60 percent of the mix, because if not, the farmer will be spraying on so much water that he will be adding to his moisture problem instead of correcting it.

"You must determine your need before you buy any product. Ask the sales person for published data in reputable journals. If it has not been published in reputable journals then it is probably because the journals would not accept it. Buy from a reputable manufacturer. It must increase bunk life and preserve nutrient value while it offers a greater profit over cost," explained Kung.

Pitfalls of New Tax Law

Dr. Larry Jenkins, Penn State University, cautioned farmers on the new tax law changes which affect how farmers are allowed to deduct pre-productive expenses for young stock.

"The government wants you to capitalize expenses. Remember that capitalizing expenses is the opposite of deducting expenses as you go for the current year. You are postponing deducting until the animals begin producing," explained Jenkins.

The catch is that whatever the amount the farmer choses to capitalize, there will be an immediate increase in self employment tax. Jenkins urges each farmer to work very closely with the tax accountant. This law is very confusing to many people, according to Jenkins. So confusing that the Farmers Tax Guide actually contains an error.

Jenkins urges anyone that needs help to contact him for a copy of a paper he authored simplifying the law. Jenkins can be reached at the Penn State University, Agricultural Economics, University Park, PA 16802.

Masstock

A 12,000 cow dairy farm in Saudi Arabia, and 1,000 cow operations in Thailand, Zambia and China all began with a 130 head dairy farm in Belfast, Ireland by two brothers. In August of 1987 Masstock's 1,000-cow operation began producing milk, but not without some difficulty.

According to Dr. Raymond Hunter, of the Masstock Corporation, bringing 1,000 heifers into production and getting them accustomed to the stalls and milking was just one of the many difficulties of this Atlanta based operation.

Masstock selected Georgia as the site of their first American based farm because of the rapid population growth being experienced in Florida and Georgia and also because of the demand for milk on the east coast. Also, the land in southern Georgia was fertile with an underlying aquafer suitable for irrigation.

"The most important thing in our operation is that we must give every animal individual treatment and attention. If we are not able to do that we will not be successful," explained Hunter.

Their 1250 cows are divided into groups of 125. Milking is done in a polygon shaped parlor on 8 hour cycles, 24 hours a day, with one hour clean up time in between. They can milk 160 cows per hour.

"We look at our employees as a primary resource. We want each one of our employees to pursue his career to the fullest. We want to build people in the company and in that way we are able operate within a decentralized management structure," said Hunter.

According to Hunter, Masstock is enabling the agricultural infrastructure to improve and have allowed suppliers to expand in their area. In the northeast, there were many farmers who benefitted from their purchase of 1,000 in-calf heifer last year.

Most of all, he hopes that all dairy farmers will benefit from the knowledge they have gained and he hopes also that other dairy famers will share their knowledge with Masstock. He reminded farmers that Masstock can employ those people who are not able to have a farm of their own and provide them with valuable training and experience until they are ready to farm on their own.

PFU Claims $15/CWT Milk Needed For Area Dairy Farmers

HARRISBURG — Allen Deiter, President of the Pennsylvania Farmers Union, (PFU) from Northumberland, PA announced today that the Board of Directors of PFU has endorsed a recommendation of our State Dairy Committee.

After much consideration, at a special PFU Board Meeting, held recently in Milesburg, PA, the Dairy Committee recommended that PFU establish a goal of $15. per CWT as an average annual blend price for the Northeastern Dairy Farmer. William Sturges of Wellsboro, PA, who was named permanent Executive Director of PFU at the same meeting stated, "Its time everyone recognizes that dairy farmers are heading towards a real financial crises in 1988". PFU officials are estimating blend prices in Federal Order #2, (NY, NJ) to plummet down to a possible low of $10.40 per CWT during the spring of 1988.

During 1987 PFU conducted a special survey of 1000 dairy farmers residing mainly in PA and NY. Among other things, the survey indicated that 73% of the farmers responding favored a milk supply management program of some nature. The same survey revealed that dairy farmers felt the annual average blend price paid to dairy farmers should be $14.30 per CWT. Arden Tewksbury, staff member of PFU, who supervised the survey stated, "If you take the $14.30 price and apply the 1987 4.4% inflation rate, you then come real close to the $15. blend price established by PFU's Dairy Committee".

Deiter and Sturges both agreed that PFU will move in a variable direction to obtain the $15. blend prices. Some of the recommendations of the Dairy Committee are: 1) PFU will remain committed to the RCMA Program in an attempt to recover some of the declining prices paid to area dairymen, 2) PFU has endorsed the National Farmers Union Milk Diversion Program (with some modifications) as a viable method to restore the milk support price back to the $11.10 per CWT level, 3) PFU will begin a campaign in connection with other farm organizations to develop and implement a milk supply management program, which will aim at keeping milk production in line with the domestic market plus a reasonable reserve. This same program must return to dairy farmers a sufficient price to cover the average cost of production plus reasonable profit (possibly 8 to 10 percent).

Deiter revealed that PFU has spent thousands of dollars and a countless number of hours of work on the RCMA Project. Deiter explained, "RCMA is a viable organization to recapture some of the faltering milk prices. However we need to immediately address the real issue of inadequate milk prices being established by antiquated pricing formulas and the over production of milk in some geographic areas".

Sturges pointed out that with recent feed prices escalating along with the faltering milk prices is a sufficient reason to support the program adopted by PFU's Dairy Committee and the Board of Directors.

Sullivan County's Hottenstein Earn Top Production Awards

The Sulbra DHIA completed its 64th year of testing September 30, 1987. The 19 herds on official testing averaged 16,830 pounds of milk, 687 pounds of butterfat at 3.61% test, and 544 pounds of protein. In 1987 1127 cows were on test in the Sulbra Dairy Herd Improvement Association. An additional four herds were on owner sampler testing throughout the year. Over the 64 years of testing herds have decreased while numbers of cows per herd have increased. During 1920-29, 245 cows were tested producing 7220 pounds of milk and 269 pounds of butterfat per cow. In the 1970's the number of cows tested was 1075 averaging 13,626 pounds of milk, and 470 pounds of butterfat. In 1986 1201 cows were on test producing an average of 15,240 pounds of milk, 558 pounds of fat, and 487 pounds of protein.

In 1987 the county ranked 21st in milk production and tied for 23rd in protein. The Sullivan County herds averaged 245 pounds more milk than state average, were .02% under state average in butterfat and 19 pounds higher in protein than state average. The lactation period for county cows averaged 312 dayus as compared to state average of 315 days.

On a genetic inventory basis, of the 1319 cows included in the genetic study 1043 cows were bred to bulls with known predected differences for fat and milk while 276 wre bred to unknown P.D. bulls. Bulls used in the herds had predicted differences of 68 and as a result the average predicted differences for milk was +279 pounds, +11 pounds fat and increased milk value of +$33. Statewide this was +199 for milk and +$23 for milk value. Somatic cell counts for the herds averaged 330,000. Awards and certificates were handed out at the conclusion of the Annual Meeting Receiving ribbons for completing herd averages of 600-699 pounds of butterfat were:

PA Milk Production Up In December

HARRISBURG — Milk production in Pennsylvania during December 1987 totaled 847 million pounds, 1 percent above the same month of 1986, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service.

The number of milk cows in the Commonwealth during the month averaged 724,000 head, 3,000 more than November but 6,000 less than December a year ago. Milk production per cow averaged 1,170 pounds in December, 25 pounds more than November and up 20 pounds per cow from December 1986.

Grain and other concentrates fed to milk cows in the Commonwealth on Jan. 1, 1988 averaged 16.5 pounds per cow per day, a pound above a year earlier. The value of grain and other concentrates fed to milk cows averaged $7.60 per hundredweight, up 25 cents from the previous year.

Milk production in the 21 states surveyed during December 1987 totaled 10 billion pounds, 3 percent more than the previous December. Total milk cows in the 21 states averaged 8.81 million head, down 1 percent from December 1986. Production per cow averaged 1,141 pounds, 46 pounds above the previous December.
